Forced Abdication of Intriguing Emperor Stirs Element of Populace to Anger.

STRENUOUS SCENES MARK THE EVENT

Seoul, via Tokio, July 19.—(Evening)—Enraged crowds are assembled at various points throughout the city and inflammatory documents against the Japanese are being freely distributed, giving rise to a forlorn hope that some active opposition is about to begin.

Serious collisions, it is believed, will take place tonight between the police and the rioters.

Marquis Ito is not likely, it is thought, to resort to extreme measures of repression until all mild means of pacification have been exhausted. Extraordinary police precautions are being taken throughout the city.

STRENUOUS TIMES IN SEOUL.

Seoul, July 19.—It is reported that a most dramatic scene occurred at the palace Thursday night when the ministers, headed by Premier Yi Wang Yong, appeared before his majesty and made the cabinet's final representation in urging the emperor's abdication. His majesty was in a high state of excitement, but the premier in the most humble but firm tone dwelt at length upon want of precaution and prudence of the emperor's policies hitherto, especially in diplomatic affairs whereby he was endangering the safety of the nation. The premier enumerated the facts of his majesty's duplicities which culminated in the dispatch of a deputation to The Hague peace conference and forcibly reasoned the uselessness of the emperor's disavowal of his relation with The Hague affairs.

Unable to successfully combat the logic of the premier's representation, the emperor sought a last refuge in the council of elder statesmen, doubtless anticipating their sympathies. The council immediately convened. Four elders quickly responded and appeared before his majesty at 1 o'clock this (Friday) morning.

Brought Him to It.

The emperor's disappointment and surprise were boundless when they unanimously agreed with the ministers' advice. His majesty's mind was finally made up and he consented to the draft of an imperial rescript announcing his abdication, which was placed before him for his signature.

The emperor's condition was indescribable. Greatly agitated and perturbed he signed the document and the seal was affixed amid impressive silence.

Briefly the emperor in the imperial rescript of abdication expresses his regret that during the forty-four years of his reign national calamities have followed in rapid succession and the people's distress became so aggravated that he deemed it now time to transfer the crown to the heir apparent.

WILLIAM JANUARY IS RELEASED FROM PRISON

Doors of Leavenworth Open; Let Modern Jean Valjean Pass Out.

Fort Leavenworth, Kan., July 19.—William January, alias Charles W. Anderson, for whose pardon a petition containing the signatures of 50,000 persons, was presented to President Roosevelt three months ago, was released from the federal prison here today. Anderson will return to Kansas City, where he will engage in business.

Anderson was convicted eleven years ago for robbing an Oklahoma postoffice and sentenced to the penitentiary for three years. He escaped two years later and went to Kansas City, assumed the name of Anderson and married. In April this year, an ex-convict who had known January in the penitentiary, notified the warden of the man's whereabouts and he was rearrested and taken back to Leavenworth. Owing to the exemplary life Anderson had led in Kansas City, his neighbors started a movement for his release. The newspapers took up the case with the result that a petition which is said to have contained the largest number of signatures ever appended to an appeal for a pardon, was forwarded to Washington. President Roosevelt reviewed the case and on recommendation of Attorney General Bonaparte, granted a pardon effective at the expiration of three months from the time of his re-arrest. January has proved a model prisoner. He says he will seek to have his citizenship restored, and if successful, will then ask the courts to change his name to Anderson for the protection of his wife and child.

Plain William January is only the ordinary convict so far as the public knows. He shined and paid the penalty. He broke jail and under the name of Anderson lived a model life. His shame was hidden from his wife and child and his neighbors. So far as they were concerned the black past was blotted out. He was determined to do right and be right. Despite the constant gnawing at his heart, despite the visions that came to him at night when he saw himself in the convict's garb and the convict's cell, he plodded on and on and was winning the battle when a Kansas City convict who knew him "snitched."

Torn From Home.

Torn from the side of his wife, William January again was dragged to prison. The second incarceration was a greater blow than the first. His castles crumbled about him and he was buried in the ruins. The newspapers of Missouri told his story. The great heart of the state went out in sympathy to the unfortunate man. Monster petitions were started. They were signed by 37,000 Missourians. These petitions were forwarded to the president and clemency was granted. Tomorrow all will be changed again and with the kindly hand of the president upon his shoulder he will

SENSATIONS GIVEN TO THE PUBLIC IN HAU CASE

Dramatic Recitals of Witnesses in Strong Contrast to Accused.

Karlsruhe, July 19.—The third day of the trial of Karl Hau, who is accused of the murder of his mother-in-law, Frau Molitor, at Baden Baden, on the sixth day of last November, brought a climax of dramatic interest at the morning session. Testimony was given by the sisters and brother of Hau's wife, who committed suicide since the incarceration of her husband and the letters she wrote just before taking her life, together with the statement made by Hau after his last interview with his wife in jail on June 7, were read in court.

Lieutenant Molitor, who is stationed at Metz, swore he suspected Hau immediately after he heard of the murder of his mother-in-law. His explanation of the dispatch sent to Frau Molitor by Hau from Paris was that his mother, as Hau knew, was easily agitated and excited over bad news. The accused, therefore, sent the message saying her daughter, Olga, was dangerously ill, in the hope that its receipt would cause a stroke of apoplexy.

Describing his talks with the late Mrs. Hau, his sister, after his return from London, the lieutenant said his sister's first theory was that some enemy of Hau had killed her mother in order to throw suspicion on her husband. It fell to the lieutenant to explain to his sister all the circumstances of the case pointing to the guilt of her husband, and this recital, he said, finally convinced her that Hau was the murderer.

Broke Down and Grovelled.

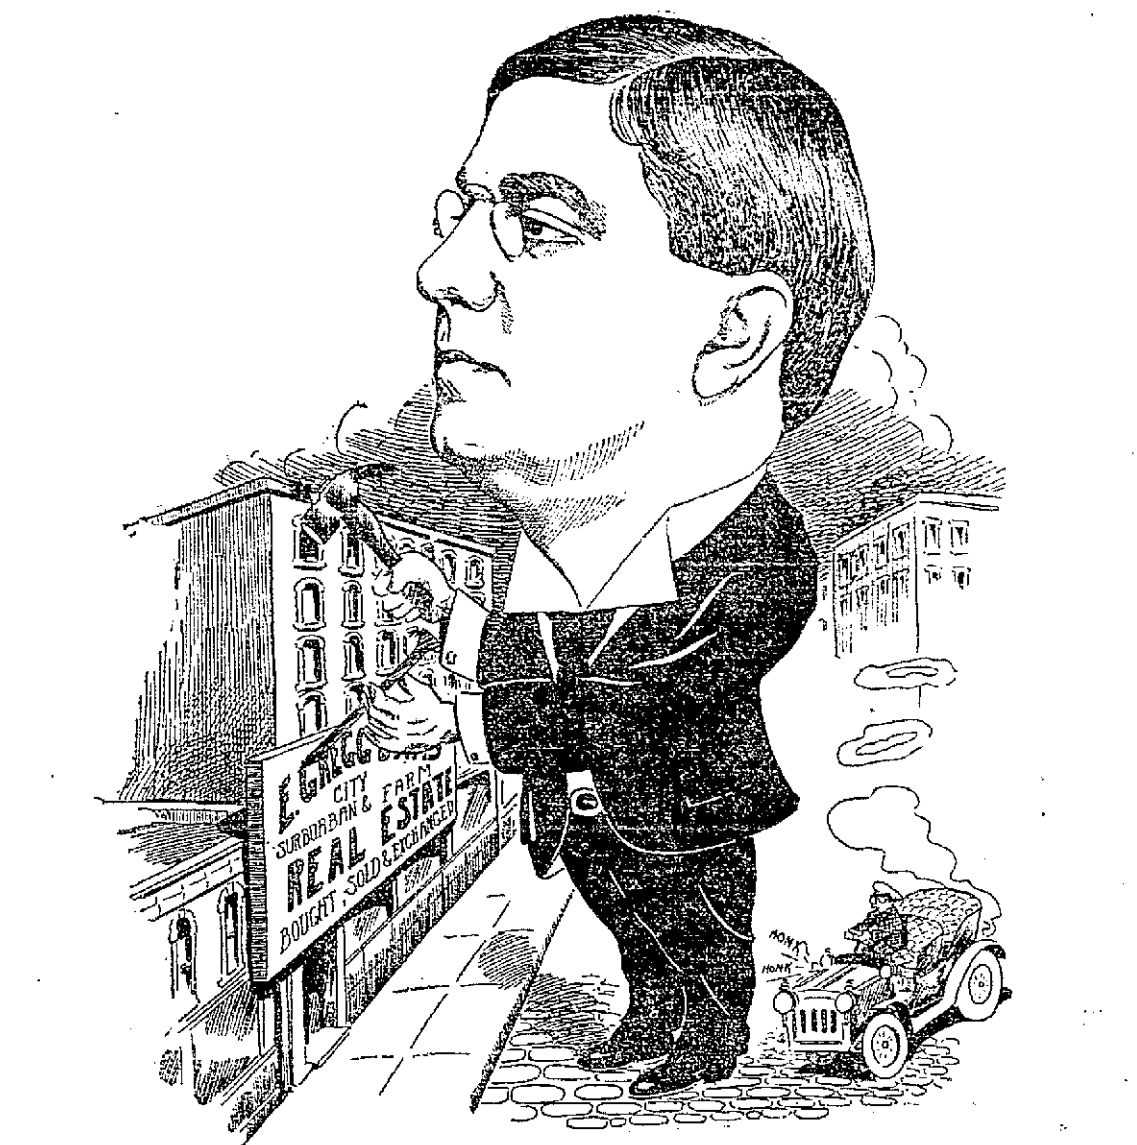

She broke down completely and grovelled on the floor in her struggle against conviction but finally yielded to the evidence. At her request the lieutenant cabled to Washington, asking if his sister's patrimony of $15,000 was still in the Union Trust company. The answer he received was that Hau had drawn all this money. Mrs. Hau said her husband had repeatedly assured her that this money was still intact in the Trust company. After his sister became convinced that her husband was guilty, she sent a cablegram to her husband's counsel in London saying she was no longer able to maintain his innocence.

The lieutenant next described his trip to Zurich to take possession of the papers left by his sister after her suicide. He found poison in her handbag and assumed that she had taken poison before going into the waters of the lake where she met her death. Otherwise he could not explain the suddenness of her ending, as Lina Molitor was an excellent swimmer.

She left a letter addressed to the police saying the reasons for her act were easy to guess—her mother had been murdered, and her husband, the man she had loved above all else in the world, was said to be the murderer. "Death is bitter," the unfortunate woman wrote, "because of my little daughter."

MEN OF AFFAIRS IN FORT WAYNE

MR. E. GREGG DAVIS.

All the way from the poles to the equator's girth,
Here's the man who'd get the job to go and try it.

RAIN AND WIND DID MUCH DAMAGE IN ST. JOSEPH

Tornado and Cloudburst Hit Missouri City—Floods at Kansas City.

St. Joseph, Mo., July 19.—A tornado and tremendous rain did heavy damage in St. Joseph and vicinity last night. Houses were wrecked, street railway tracks torn out and cellars flooded. The family of Daniel Richardson, one mile east of the city, had a miraculous escape from their demolished residence. They were buried under the debris in the basement, where they had taken refuge. The wind lifted the house bodily and none of the heavy timbers fell on them.

Scores of houses were washed from their foundations in the city by the rain, which amounted to a cloudburst. A dozen residences were struck by lightning, but no fatalities are reported. The loss to crops will be heavy.

DAMAGE AT KANSAS CITY.

Kansas City, July 19.—Further heavy rains north of here last night caused the Missouri river at Kansas City to rise a little higher and as a result the cellars in two dozen wholesale houses in the west bottoms were partially flooded this morning. Stocks had been removed to places of safety and the damage in this direction was light. Truck gardens at Quindaro, along the outskirts of Kansas City, Kan., along the Missouri river, have been flooded, causing damage estimated at $20,000 and several truck farmers with their families are moving to higher grounds. The stage of the Missouri this morning was twenty-three feet. If there are no further rains in the west and northwest for several days the Missouri will still be low enough to take care of flood waters without danger of a severe overflow, the weather observer says. The Kaw is rising slowly also.

BARRACKS WERE ATTACKED.

Revolutionary Outbreak Is Reported From Guayaquil.

Guayaquil, Ecuador, July 19.—The four military barracks in this city were attacked simultaneously early today by armed revolutionists, who call themselves independents. The independents were finally defeated, several of their number being killed or wounded.

The local residence of President Alfaro also was attacked. The revolutionists purposed to kill the president, but he was unharmed.

Guayaquil has been placed under martial law.

ANOTHER MOVE FOR AN INSTRUCTED VERDICT

Formal Steps Are Taken in Haywood Trial at Boise.

Boise, Idaho, July 19.—The defense at the opening of the Haywood trial this morning renewed the motion for an instructed verdict. Richardson said that the motion was made at this time for record. Judge Wood overruled the motion.

Judge Wood announced at the opening of the Haywood case this morning that he would give his decision on the questions argued yesterday at 2 p. m. today. Court adjourned until that time, when James H. Hawley will open for the state.

For the first time since the Haywood trial started, James McParland, the detective, whose name has been so often mentioned in connection with the securing of evidence against the Western Federation of Miners, was in the court room today. He had come to listen to the arguments and attracted considerable attention.

Judge Wood announced at 10 o'clock that he would not be ready to rule on the matter of excluding certain evidence from the consideration of the jury and the arguments of counsel until 2 p. m. He instructed James H. Hawley, leading counsel for the state, to be ready to proceed at that time.

Mr. Hawley is not expected to conclude until tomorrow afternoon. The opening address for the defense will be made by Attorney E. F. Richardson, of Denver, on Monday morning.

To preserve the record, Mr. Richardson again today moved that the jury be instructed to return a verdict of not guilty on the ground that the defendant, Haywood, has not been connected by the evidence with the crime alleged. The motion was formally made and formally denied.

RULING IS IMPORTANT.

Postoffice Regulation Affects Articles of Celluloid.

The Fort Wayne postoffice is just in receipt of a new ruling by the department at Washington that is of much importance. It is as follows: "Articles made wholly or in part of celluloid must be enclosed in a metal box with a tightly-fitting lid, before being admitted to the domestic mails." This will affect a large number of Christmas and birthday cards which are now offered for sale.

NOTHING KNOWN OF MASSACRE.

St. Petersburg, July 19.—Nothing is known here of the report published in London newspapers yesterday in the shape of a dispatch from Vienna (and also cabled to the United States) that a wholesale massacre of Jews had occurred at Skonka, in Russian Poland, near the Austrian frontier. Furthermore, in reply to a question the correspondent at Warsaw of the Russian Telegraph agency declared there has been no anti-Jewish outbreak in the Polish provinces of Russia.

BRANCH STATE AND PRIVATE BANKS UNLAWFUL

State Auditor Notifies Such They Must Quit Doing Business.

Indianapolis, July 19.—Acting under the authority of an opinion of Attorney General James Bingham, State Auditor Billheimer has refused to recognize branch state and private banks, and has ordered those banks which have had branches established to close them. The state bank of Valparaiso has had a branch at Wabash; the Covington bank at Cates and Perryville, and the Brownstown State bank several branches. With the exception of the Valparaiso bank, the others have closed their branches. The auditor expects the Valparaiso bank to close its Wabash branch also.

The question came to the auditor's attention through the examinations. In examining the main bank, the examiners would be told that a certain amount was on deposit at a branch. To this the examiner would reply that he had no authority to examine the branch. Hence the examiner could not tell what the exact condition of the bank was.

None of these branches disallowed paper, nor made loans, but they received deposits and honored checks. The officials contended that they had this right. The attorney general, in his opinion, and the auditor in a letter written by him to the officers of one of the banks, took the position that if these branches could perform any of the banking functions, they could perform all. And not being permitted to perform all could not be permitted to perform any.

The ruling of State Auditor Billheimer will have no effect upon Fort Wayne banking institutions.

FOUR MEN ENLISTED IN NAVY.

Lieutenant Steel of the navy recruiting headquarters, arrived in this city this morning, accompanied by the district examining doctor, D. R. Castro. Dr. Castro has taken the place of Dr. Lumsden, the former district examiner who was recently transferred to another district. Five men were examined by the doctor and four of these passed as follows: Charles Wotwick, Harry James Keller, Vincent Merrill and George E. Hall, all of this city. The men will be sent to the training school at Norfolk, Va., tomorrow morning over the Lake Shore, and will attend there for four months. When this time is up it is calculated that the fleet will be leaving for the Pacific waters and these men may be with it as ordinary seamen.

Quartermaster Carroll, who has had charge of the recruiting office in this city for some time, will leave on next Sunday for a two weeks' vacation and will spend his time on the lakes. He is to be replaced here and become a traveling recruiting officer, visiting the smaller towns at different intervals. His place here will be taken by Carpenter's Mate of the 1st Class L. J. Holmes. Mr. Holmes will assume his duties next Monday.

HUNDREDS FELL BY HEAT'S STROKE; FEW DIE

Few Fatal Prostrations in Philadelphia—Elks End Reunion.

Philadelphia, July 19.—Of the thousands of persons overcome by heat, while watching the Elks parade yesterday, about 100 spent the night in hospitals. Many of them were discharged today. The number of deaths due more or less directly to the heat and humidity amounted to 4, and there are about a dozen cases considered serious by the hospital physicians. The dead are residents of this city and those still in a serious condition are also Philadelphians. The Philadelphia police, hospital authorities and emergency corps are ready to handle the situation. The fact that the death list was small is principally due to the prompt relief given by the authorities, who were prepared for a large number of heat cases.

The number of prostrations, however, went beyond their expectations and in consequence all hospitals and temporary hospital quarters were swamped.

The big feature of Elks week being over, thousands of visitors left town today either for the various seashore resorts, the Jamestown exposition or their homes. There is still a great number of the Elks delegates will devote the day to a pilgrimage to historic Valley Forge, where United States Senator Knox, whose residence adjoins Washington's camp grounds, will deliver an address. Another feature arranged is a trip on the Delaware.

The grand lodge held a session today and a resolution was reported favoring a special committee for the preservation of the Elks and doing away with the teeth of the animal as an emblem of the order.

Beginning at 11 o'clock tonight the Pen and Pencil club will entertain visiting Elks at a "Night in Bohemia." The official records show that seventy-nine thousand persons registered at the bureau provided for the members of the order and their ladies.

Announcement of prizes in connection with the reunion probably will not be made until tonight.

WORST OF TROUBLE APPEARS OVER AT HANVILLE

Threatened Lynching of Italians in Louisiana Has Been Averted.

New Orleans, La., July 19.—With the peaceable dispersal early today of a posse of three hundred men who had formed at Gretna, La., to lynch three of the Italians convicted of the Lamana murder, an acute crisis in the lawless order of this state safely passed.

This posse was the last of several small mobs which formed at widely separated points and talked about hanging the Italians if favorable opportunity presented. Probably Governor Blanchard's prompt action in ordering out two companies of state militia within two hours after the verdict saved the Italians' lives. The soldiers arrived at the Hanville jail, where the prisoners were confined, shortly before midnight in time to forestall plans which were on foot to take posers from New Orleans, either by boat, wagon, special train or automobiles.

Nearly one hundred soldiers guard the lonely and exposed Hanville jail today and it may be necessary to keep them on duty there until the Italians are removed to a safer place. The prisoners must first be sentenced.

Indignation over the jury's verdict has grown considerably and many of the reports of the court proceedings, while they show a fair trial, make comment on the character of several jurymen as large employers of Italian labor, which augments the resentment.

The police regulations in New Orleans, under advice of Mayor Behrman, have been given the strictest enforcement since last night in order to reduce to the minimum chances for gatherings hostile to the convicted Italians.

MORE TROOPS ARE SENT.

Hanville, La., July 19.—Two more commands of state troops were sent this morning from New Orleans to Hanville, where the jury yesterday brought in a verdict of guilty without capital punishment in the case of the four Italians charged with the murder of little Walter Lamana, who was kidnapped here early in June. One command consisted of a battery of field artillery with rapid firing guns and the other a company of infantry. There is no apprehension of immediate danger, but in order to make less arduous the work of the two companies of infantry already here, the additional troops were ordered to the court house to aid in guarding the prisoners.

There is still some talk of lynching, but Governor Blanchard announced this morning that the law would take its course if it became necessary to order out all of the state troops. The authorities appear to have the situation well in hand.

HICKSVILLE MAN HAS BEEN RELEASED ON PAROLE

Floyd Rumbaugh, Convicted of Murder of Marshal Gets Freedom.

Hicksville, O., July 19.—Floyd Rumbaugh, one of the trio convicted in Deafness county common pleas court for the murder of Enos Rath, then marshal of this place, has been granted a parole by the Ohio penitentiary board of pardons.

Rumbaugh was received into the penitentiary from this county in July of 1900 to serve a sentence of twenty years on a charge of manslaughter. His companions, also convicted on the same charge for the murder of Rath, were Frank Zuber and a man by the name of Johnson, each being sentenced for life. Johnson died soon after being incarcerated in prison, but Zuber is still in the pen and is not eligible to parole.

The evidence against these men was altogether circumstantial and many believe them innocent. Judge Snook, who defended the accused and who has always believed them innocent, has been a hard worker to secure the release of the prisoner and has finally been rewarded for his labors.

JEROME MUST GIVE COURT LIST.

Ordered to Produce Names to Contributors of His Campaign.

New York, July 19.—An interesting situation developed in the continued examination of District Attorney Jerome before supreme court Justice Dayton today, when Clarence J. Shearn, counsel for W. R. Hearst, tried to obtain the list of contributors to the campaign fund raised for Mr. Jerome prior to his last election as district attorney. After a long argument it was decided by the court that if Mr. Jerome had the list under his control he was to produce it in court. "If it is not under Mr. Jerome's control I can do nothing," said the justice.

The list was in the hands of Howard S. Gans, a former assistant district attorney. Mr. Jerome said he never knew anything of the list, and never saw it. Mr. Gans is now in Europe, having sailed a week ago. He will not return for a month.

Mr. Shearn said he was willing to give Mr. Jerome a reasonable time in which to produce the list.

Mr. Jerome's examination is being conducted in connection with his libel suit for $250,000 against Mr. Hearst's newspaper.

Three local physicians have been appointed to the faculty of Purdue Medical college at Indianapolis. Drs. J. H. Gilpin, B. W. Rhamy and Ben Perly Weaver are the men so honored.

SECOND EFFORT PROVES BAD FAILURE FOR THULLENS

Wife Asks for Another Divorce Decree—The Court News.

In a divorce complaint filed in the superior court today by Barbara Thullen she alleges that her second attempt to live with Adam Thullen has proven as big a failure as her first and she wants to be freed once more from the bonds of matrimony.

After the wife had secured a decree she consented to a second marriage, she says, only after her husband had promised to mend his ways and be the true, gentle spirit that his wife wanted about the house as her helpmate. She says that he was all right for a time, but that he developed a desire to laminate her and made several attempts, one of which was parried by her daughter.

Moreover, she says her husband called her names too vile to put into a court record, that he pushed her violently against the sharp corners of the house and covered her with black and blue spots, and would not speak to her for three weeks at a time. She asks that he be restrained from drawing his wages from the Pennsylvania company and that the court forbid him to molest her while the suit is pending. Both had been married before and both have children by their former marriages. Judge R. B. Deschamps filed the suit.

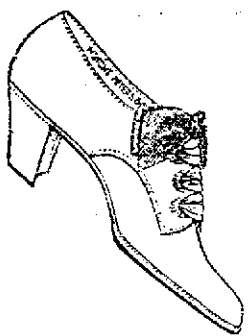

Court News.

Each additional express suits have been filed in the superior court against the Adams Express company and one against the National. All are of the same character as the others that have been filed from time to time during the week.

William G. Young has brought suit to recover from Frederick and Frieda Koenig a house and lot in Lakeside and also asks $300 damages. He claims to have bought the property at sheriff's sale while the Koenigs hold it under a contract from the former owners. Emrick & Emrick are the attorneys.

POPE HOLDS AUTHORS WRONG.

Summons Congregation of Inquisition to Correct Errors.

Rome, July 19.—The syllabus promulgated by the pope Wednesday with regard to the so-called modernism in the faith contains a preamble which sets forth that Roman Catholic authors, under the pretext of examining dogmas, explain them in the name of history in such a fashion that the dogmas themselves disappear. To prevent such errors, the prelates say, the pope has ordered a congregation of inquisition to note and reprove the principal errors, and with his approbation sixty-five propositions are condemned. These include the following: Divine inspiration does not guarantee all and every part of the holy scriptures against error.

The resurrection of the Savior is not an historical fact, but is purely supernatural. It can neither be demonstrated, nor is it demonstrable.

The Roman Catholic church became the head of all churches not by divine ordinance, but by purely political circumstances.

The church is an enemy of natural and theological sciences.

The Christian doctrine was first Jewish, then Pauline, then Hellenic, then universal.

The principal articles of the apostles' creed had not the same significance to the primitive Christians as they have to the Christians of the present time.

The Wild West On the Trail, Buffalo Bill Leading

Col. Wm. F. Cody, Buffalo Bill, will visit Fort Wayne tomorrow, after an extraordinary season at Madison Square Garden, New York, where thousands were unable to obtain admission. The Wild West and Col. Cody's assemblage of Rough Riders of the World come to town after spending no less than five years in the cities of Great Britain and Europe. When the nations beyond the seas find instruction and delight in the Wild West there must be something exceptional in its features. This is easily explained by the fact that this exhibition of life in the old far west, when men took their lives and those of their loved ones in their hands to establish homes on the great plains, is real, actual and truthful. Realism here finds its highest type, the most simple and faithful that can be conceived.

Real Indian chiefs, braves, squaws and panoplies, real Mexican vaqueros, real cowboys and real ranch girls, real cavalry of the United States, England, Germany, Japan, South America, Arabia and Russia; these are all here, there is no limitation, no claptrap. There are Cossacks and little brown men of Japan; the American soldiers, cavalry and artillery and veterans. So are all of the other military representatives. It may happen that this is the last opportunity to see the wonders of the Wild West, for the march of time may carry it into the far beyond. At any rate the opportunity should not be neglected, for in no other way can the American student obtain a clear and more comprehensive idea of a wonderful and important epoch in the march of events in American history. You see no theater tinsel, only the real men just as they lived and died in the days between the forties and the seventies. The success in New York is too well known to our readers to make further eulogy necessary.

No street parade will be given. Every energy of the staff being utilized to give good performance twice daily, 2 and 8 p. m., rain or shine.

Some Wild West Points.

By an altogether new process of lighting the performances given by Buffalo Bill's Wild West are as distinctly seen from all parts of the seating arrangements at night as they are by day. There is an abundance of light, distributed so that there are no shadows and the vast arena is brilliantly lighted in all parts. The night splendors of the exhibition are as effective as are the afternoon performances and the battle scenes, military maneuvers, rough-riding, drills and pageants constitute an entertainment distinctively in a class by itself.

Students of American history will find an abundance of interesting material spread before them in brilliant spectacles and stirring scenes with Buffalo Bill's Wild West when it visits this city. Col. Wm. F. Cody, the original and only Buffalo Bill, will appear at each performance and he will present several distinct types of the American Indian, that fast disappearing race which has disappeared foot by foot the invasion of the white man until their once vast domain has been entirely wrested from the redman's control. The American cowboy will be another type of men who, because their occupation is gone, are fast dwindling into small numbers. The fencing of the cattle lands of the west has greatly reduced the necessity of mounted herders and within a few years the cowboy of the past, as represented today, will have ceased to exist as a class. The battle scenes with Col. Cody's exhibition are based upon authentically enacted with true life and add another element worthy of the consideration of the students and readers of American history.

Devlin's Zouaves will be one of the most interesting features in the Buffalo Bill's Wild West entertainment, when Col. Wm. F. Cody brings his big organization to this city. The Zouaves will be seen in lightning drills and manual of arms and will give a thrilling exhibition of wall-scaling, which demonstrates the effectiveness of this type of soldiery in actual warfare. Other military features with the Wild West will be cavalry and artillery drills, tent-pegging, charges, drills and general maneuvers. Then, too, there will be stirring battle scenes, in the chief of which, the Battle of Summit Springs, Buffalo Bill will re-enact the role which he originally created in actual Indian warfare many years ago.

MILK ORDINANCE MEETS APPROVAL OF THE COMMITTEE

Councilmen Hold Warm Session Discussing the Measure.

When the city council holds its next regular session the stringent milk ordinance, formulated by physicians deeply interested in the preservation of the health of babies, will become a law as it was approved Thursday night at a warm session of the committee of the whole. There were some minor changes that will not affect the measure materially and so much time was taken in its consideration that the police salary increase ordinance and one providing for nine additional firemen did not have an inning.

There was a fight made on the salary of the inspector provided for as Mr. Langard thought $1,440 was too much and moved that $1,200 be substituted, but his motion was lost. Councilman Beyer thought the present ordinance sufficient for the enforcement of pure milk delivery and suggested that the fault lay with the health department in neglecting to compel milkmen to comply with present regulations.

Dr. H. O. Bruggeman took this as a personal fling at the administration of his office and stated that he had been unable to account for the stand appropriations to maintain the standard he desired. He also said that it is not incumbent upon him to devote all of his time to the duties of secretary of the city health board and intimated that as the ally of the controller Mr. Beyer had constituted himself the watchdog of the treasury and voted and worked against measures for equipping the department properly.

President Schwieler rapped and said the discussion had reached a point where he felt called upon to call the contestants to order, and when Mr. Beyer did not know whether or not he wanted to vote on the Langard amendment, the president told him he must, according to the rules, cast his ballot or vacate his seat. He voted for the amendment.

Dr. Miles F. Porter, and Dr. E. J. McOscar were present on behalf of the Fort Wayne Medical society and both supported the ordinance as did Dr. A. P. Buchman, who is a member of the city health board. The discussion consumed more than two hours and at its close an adjournment was taken.

BECOMES SLAVE TO PAY DEBT.

Former Official Old and Feeble, Works to Make U. S. Shortage.

Laporte, Ind., July 19.—"I will pay back every cent of my obligation," was the remark made by George Lightcap, when he retired from the office of treasurer of Stark county, with a shortage of $25,000 charged to him. "I mean to prove that I can be honest."

That he is sincere in his determination to remove the stain from his official record was evidenced yesterday, when the bondsmen paid in the balance of the shortage. Lightcap, though old and feeble, had turned all kinds of manual labor, turning over to his bondsmen every cent that he could spare above the actual cost of living.

While he has paid but a small amount in the aggregate on his obligation, he declares he will work the years which he was permitted to live and continue the payment. Unfortunately speculations by Lightcap while he was in office contributed to his financial ruin.

LIFTS $100; THINKS IT WIFE'S.

Husband Takes Another Woman's Purse to Warn Spouse of Danger.

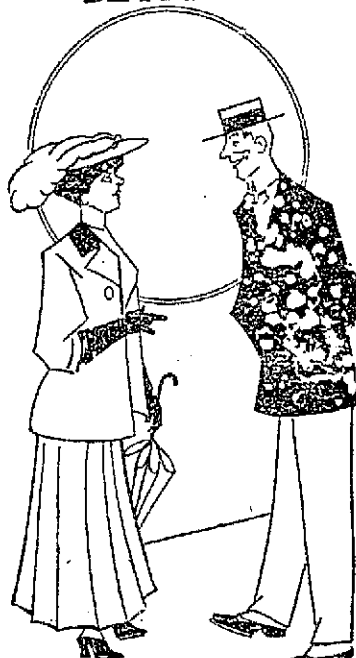

Richmond, Va., July 19.—To convince his wife of the danger that her purse would be stolen if she carried it dangling from her belt, John Endergrass snatched her purse as she supposed, from her as they were on a crowded street corner yesterday. When he arrived home he discovered that his wife had her purse, and that he had taken one belonging to another woman. It contained $100. Unable to find the owner, Endergrass turned over the money to a church.

ENDS LIFE IN NIAGARA FALLS.

Unknown Man Leaves Note on Bridge and Plunges Into Rapids.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., July 19.—An unknown man about sixty years of age committed suicide last night by jumping from Goat Island bridge into the rapids. Hundreds of people watched him as he was swept over the brink of the American falls. He left a crutch and cane on the bridge, also a note, which read: "Tell my friends I have gone to glory. J. D."

GROWING GIRLS NEED PINK PILLS

The Tonic Necessary for Their Proper Development and to Insure a Healthful and Happy Life—Read This Statement of an Iowa Woman.

There is a form of anemia, or bloodlessness, that often afflicts growing girls, that has been called the anemia of development. It requires care and proper attention as neglect may cause a life of unhappiness and suffering. There is also danger of consumption, especially if a dry, hacking cough is noticed. The disease is in the blood and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are particularly well adapted to cure it. We have yet to hear of a case in which these blood-making pills have been tried without success.

Miss Esther E. Durbin, of 212 1/2 Main street, Davenport, Iowa, says: "When I was a school girl I became afflicted with anemia and grew so weak that I could scarcely walk. There was a craving for starch and I ate a great deal of it. I was pale and thin, had no ambition and was subject to hysterical attacks. My breath was so short that I would have to sit down and rest on the way up the school steps. I would fall asleep during a recitation in spite of my efforts to keep awake and at last had to give up going to school."

"Sometimes it seemed that my heart would jump out of my body. Almost everything I ate hurt my stomach and I had a bladder trouble that caused me to blot and puff up. I had two doctors during the two years before I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and at last they told my mother that they could do nothing for me."

"Our druggist recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and when I had taken them about three weeks I noticed a change for the better. Altogether I used them for about a year and they gave me new life and health when every other means had failed. I have recommended the pills to many others and am always glad to do so."

A valuable booklet, "Diseases of the Blood," containing fuller information will be sent free upon request.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Mayor Hoesy cannot plead ignorance of violations of the law. Saloon men themselves admit it and pay fines.

Evidently Hon. Samuel M. Ralston takes into account that gubernatorial lightning may strike even him. He has no rod in the air. At all events he modifies the withdrawal of his candidacy for governor and states that if he has to run he will, but is not disposed to hunt any trouble of the sort.

Mayor Hoesy could do a ten-strike by giving his police orders to enforce the law next Sunday. But Mayor Hoesy doesn't want to make a ten or any other description of strike along that line. The belief gains ground that as a matter of fact he dares not to assert the independence of his administration nor his own.

Now comes information for which Senator Hopkins, of Illinois, assumes responsibility that in a conference at Sagamore hill it was decided that the tariff must be revised at the next session of congress, but that this delicate task must be performed by "its friends." Good enough. Ought to be done that way if at all. The kind of revision "its friends" will give it will tickle Governor Cummings and his Iowa cohorts pretty nearly to death.

The returns from the state of Massachusetts are by themselves ample to prove that the innocent bystander, brother to the innocent bystander should take to the timber or the pasture when he travels a highway also traveled by automobiles. The number of deaths and serious accidents reported for one month in that state looks like the casualty list of a big train wreck.

The low railway fare law of North Carolina seems to be an enactment upon which federal railway rate laws might well be modeled. Ticket agent down in that state has begun to take a vacation which will be spent with a chain gang at Asheville, offense being that he sold a ticket and charged more than the fare prescribed by the law of that state. Rather tough, indeed; sort of punishment those Toledo trust magnates would describe as cruel and unusual. At the same time it is reasonably to be supposed that the law is the law in North Carolina as elsewhere. Exception, however: It isn't in Fort Wayne.

The emperor of Korea has at last been driven from his throne and Japan and a part of Korea will breathe easier. Japan has steadily been moving affairs to that end since the conclusion of the Russo-Japanese war. The emperor has been looked upon as the arch mischiefmaker in Korea and there is little question that he is a wily, trouble-breeding gentleman whose continuance on the throne would be both embarrassment and threat to Japan. At the same time, his forced abdication can be looked upon as little less than a rape made upon his rights, though it may be necessary to the progress of Japan's empire on the Asiatic continent. Dominance in Korea is necessary to Japan's vast scheme of imperial aggrandizement and to her measures for providing for the perfect military security of the nation. The crucial step in forcing the emperor's abdication was hastened by the Korean emperor's act in sending delegates to the league conference to protest against Japan's policy in Korea. And it was merely hastened; the step itself was soon or later inevitable.

GRADUATION IN OLD CACTUS.

We've got no football college for to stir up noise and strife
And to interfere with life's the calm and peaceful life;
Our school is small and painless, and our class of graduates
Is just one every youngster—the kid of Broncho Bates.
It's true that Broncho junior ain't much on looks or brains.
Though the schoolmarm, who's quite purty, has sure took a lot of pains
To pump some knowledge in him—and, in fact, she's near been sick
A-groundin' that young Bates kid in the rules of 'Rithmetic.

When the time for graduatin' this class of one come nigh
Us punchers all assembled underneath the teacher's eye—
For we groups for education, just as pretty as mind kin teach,
When the one who educates us is as pretty as a peach.
Well, it sorter dawned upon us that young Broncho was a dunce
When he fell down, flabbergasted, on his various little stunts;
He couldn't add up figgers, and then he slipped up, like 'twas grose,
On the first line of the poetry in his graduation piece.

But finally the youngster grabs a gun out of his sutt
And he yells, "I'll show 'em teacher, that, by thunder, I kin shoot!"
And he busts the teacher's ink well with a well directed shot,
And he peppers up the blackboard with a ball for every spot.
Well, we rolled under the benches, and we hid behind the teacher's death,
Though the teacher was so frightened she could hardly git her breath.
And we voted that old Cactus surely took the raisin bun
When his graduates could demonstrate such knowledge of the gun.

DETECTIVES DISCOVER TAINTED MONEY IN OLD TRUNKS

Syrians Hide Savings Among Filthy Rags About Their Homes.

Upon search warrants issued last night for the purpose of unraveling the strange conditions that surrounded an alleged robbery at the Syrian home of Abraham Azar, Detectives Charles Lenz and George Soliday dug up about $5,000 of tainted money. Thursday night belonging to the members of the colony who are hoarding their savings. The money was not tainted through the medium by which it was earned, but it was hidden among filthy rags in old trunks and other receptacles that are in a state to demand the attention of the health authorities. Nothing tangible resulted from the search and the authorities are still mystified. They are unable to understand how a large sum as $500, which is claimed from rooms in which the possessors were sleeping at the time of the thefts and the fact that few of the foreigners can talk intelligible English makes the task of investigating more difficult.
Two men picked up Thursday by the police as one of them was about to leave the city were charged this morning with loitering. They had none of the missing certificates of deposit on their persons when they were apprehended.

SOCIETY

Social affairs of today are not numerous and Mrs. Marguerite Beck's dancing party at Robison park this evening in honor of Miss Stutz, of Washington, will be the most important gathering of the evening.

Miss Blanche Reuss gave a small picnic at Robison park this afternoon for her guest, Miss Mary Louise Sunderland, of Chicago. The supper was taken to the park and disposed of in regular picnic fashion. The picnicers attended the theater in the evening. Miss Reuss' guests were Miss Sunderland, Miss Virginia White, Miss Alice Knight, Miss Esther Fleming, Miss Evelyn Fisher and Messrs. Roger Fisher, James and Miles Porter, Frederick Fitch, James Smith and Maurice Seaberg. Miss Edna Reuss and Mrs. George Sunderland chaperoned the party.

Miss Helen Phillips, of Celina, O., and Miss Helen Hayes, of Kalamazoo, who are visiting Miss Lucy and Miss Virginia Bash, were honor guests. The party was without a semblance of formality and everyone had a merry time. The rooms were decorated with field flowers and each young lady found a partner for supper by matching a single flower that had been given her.

Miss Louise and Miss Beatrice Heiny, of East Wayne street, entertained at red letters yesterday afternoon for Miss Hilda Crone, who is a visitor in the city. A SMALL SECRET.

Couldn't Understand the Taste of His Customers.

Two men were discussing the various food products now being supplied in such variety and abundance.

One, a grocer said: "I frequently try a package or so of any certain article before offering it to my trade, and in that way sometimes form a different idea than my customers have."

"For instance, I thought I would try some Postum Food Coffee, to see what reason there was for such a call for it. At breakfast I didn't like it and supper proved the same, so I naturally concluded that my taste was different from that of the customers who bought it right along."

"A day or two after, I waited on a lady who was buying a 25c package and told her I couldn't understand how one could fancy the taste of Postum."

"I know just what is the matter," she said; "you put the coffee boiler on the stove for just fifteen minutes, and ten minutes of that time it simmered, and perhaps five minutes it boiled; now if you will have it left to boil full fifteen minutes after it commences to boil, you will find a delicious Java-like beverage, rich in food value of gluten and phosphates, so choice that you will never abandon it. It is particularly when you see the great gain in health."

Well, I took the Postum army for good, and life seems worth living since I have gotten rid of my old time stomach and kidney troubles."

Postum is no sort of medicine, but pure liquid food, and this, together with a relief from coffee worked the change. "There's a Reason."

NEW DEAL HAS BEGUN;

NEW OFFICERS IN LOUISVILLE

Appointees Take Places of the Ousted—Big Police Shake-Down Started.

Louisville, Ky., July 19.—With the appointment by Governor Beckham of complete new boards of councilmen and aldermen in a day or two, Louisville will have reached the culmination of a political revolution which in extent and effects has only been paralleled by one or two other cities of the first-class in the history of the United States. The upheaval is the result of the recent decision of the Kentucky court of appeals overturning the municipal election of 1905. On the face of the returns as counted on election day, the democratic ticket for city and county offices (Jefferson county) had been declared elected, but a contest in the courts was instituted by representatives of the fusion ticket, the only one in the field against the democrats. On the showing made the court of appeals in the final hearing of the case decided that "gross frauds" in the matter of repeating, illegal voting, intimidation of voters and falsification of the count had prevailed to such an extent as to render the election invalid.

Practically No Election. The legal effect of the finding was as though no election had been held, and under the terms of the court's mandate it became incumbent on Governor Beckham to appoint boards of councilmen and aldermen and a mayor for the city of Louisville and a county judge for Jefferson county.

The mayor and county judge were under the law empowered to fill all the remaining county and city offices made vacant by the decision. All the appointees under the decision hold office until a special election is held in November of this year to fill the offices until 1909.

Governor Beckham appointed Robert W. Bingham mayor. Walter P. Lincoln was appointed county judge. The new mayor and county judge proceeded forthwith to make practically a clean sweep.

Of all the minor offices, such as city treasurer, county sheriff, etc., to the number of eighteen, only two or possibly three of those holding under the 1905 election have been or will be allowed to hold on until November. Contrariwise, none of the unsuccessful fusion candidates has been appointed to any vacant places, but one prominent fusion leader was appointed sheriff. The mayor also appointed new boards of safety and public works.

The board of works is reported to be contemplating a general clean up of those holding positions in that department, on the ground that in common with a number of members of the police and fire departments, their chief work has been in the nature of that organized intimidation and connivance at election frauds which caused the overturning of the 1905 election.

Big Police Shakedown. The board of safety has already made a start by securing the resignation of Chief of Police Gunther and the reduction of Assistant Chief Ridge and six captains, all the commanding officers of the police department, to the rank of patrolmen. Similar sweeping changes are expected to be made in the personnel of the fire department, although Mayor Bingham announced last night that he would retain the chief, William Tyson.

One of the results thus far of the changes has been the putting of the lid down tight on saloons and gambling and the general exodus of small gamblers and lindenloin habitués and "suspects" of all kinds. Last Sunday Louisville was absolutely "dry" from midnight Saturday until 5 o'clock a. m. Monday.

The situation seems to be shaping itself toward one of the fiercest struggles ever known in Louisville politics at the coming democratic primary and the municipal election following, when the recently ousted officials and their following hope to regain control.

Baral Goes Before A JURY WITH SALOON HEARING

Adams Township Tries Second Venued Case—State Lost Out.

Henry Baral was placed on trial in Justice Grabner's court in Adams township today on the charge of failure to remove the screens from the windows and doors of his saloon on Sunday, July 7, as provided in the Nicholson law.

A jury was empaneled by the attorneys for Baral and some time was consumed in filling a panel and it was nearly noon before the hearing of evidence was taken up. No verdict had been reached at 3:30 o'clock.

Disagreed on Technicality. Failure to convict Ray Reaser at Huntington yesterday was due to the omission of the prosecutor to prove that Reaser was the proprietor of a saloon or that he had ever sold any liquor at the place on East Columbia street designated in the affidavit.

The defense had absolutely no evidence to offer and succeeded in playing on the technical points until some of the jurors refused to vote for a conviction. Deputy Prosecutor Harry W. Nindé stated this morning that he would try the case a second time and next Tuesday was fixed as the date for the hearing.

THOMAS ORCHESTRA STAR FEATURE AT WINONA

Engagement Begins Monday With Large Advance Sale of Seats.

Winona Lake, Ind., July 19.—This morning before the breakfast hour the lobby of the Administration building and the long hallway looked a railway waiting room on "excursion day," and the ticket sales during the day proved even heavier than last year. The coming of one of the greatest orchestras in the world to Winona is certainly a great event of the year.

Each concert will be personally directed by Frederic W. Stock, successor to Theodore Thomas. Among the eminent soloists who will be heard in the twice-a-day concerts are: Mrs. Thomas Walton, one of the most talented contraltos of the 20th century; Bruno America's greatest cellist; Ludwig Becker, the gifted violinist; Armin Van Den Berg, the famous Belgian pianist.

The Thomas orchestra is the product of the great city of Chicago and its organization was made possible by Chicago capital. The late Theodore Thomas was, beyond doubt, one of the greatest musical directors of his time and had endeavored to secure the strongest combination of instrumental musicians ever brought together. Plans were formulated whereby this great orchestra became not only the musical inspiration of the Chicago people and its visitors, but with the building of its great musical home in Chicago, at a cost of $400,000, a commercial income, which enables this large body of trained musicians to distribute out in the great musical centers of the country. Winona has been chosen for the middle west outside of Chicago, and is bringing this opportunity to her citizens for a full week engagement, with two great concerts each day, with all the other good things of the assembly each day for 50 cents, with reserved seats for 25 cents. Thus it will be seen that Winona is carrying out the purpose of the orchestra's aim, giving the people an opportunity to hear the very best musicians in the country at mere nominal cost. With the coming of this opportunity for music lovers it is presumed that all will take advantage and visit Winona during the week.

The largest crowd of the season was seen at the auditorium last evening, when from half past seven until half past ten hours were divided between the Wied band and Mr. Robertson in his Proteo-scope lecture. Both entertainments were given perfect ovations and the large auditorium was packed to its utmost capacity. A better pleased audience never retired from the hallings, each individual enthusiastic over the splendid evening of music and motion pictures.

The Winona base ball team played return compliments to Winona base ballists Thursday afternoon. The Alford team visited Winona July 4, and in a closely contested game of thirteen innings, the Alford team gained victory by one score in a battle of two to one, the teams holding a single score each until the twelfth inning. Yesterday the Alford team turned the tables. They secured one score in the first inning. Winona scored in the third, and the tally keeper fondled nothing but "goose eggs" for the most of the game. The Alford team broke the spell by a single score in another inning, and the game ended in a double score tie. Winona was only given one error while Alford had four charged up to her account.

The regular weekly golf tournament will take place Saturday morning at 9 o'clock. It will be an eighteen holes, handicap play. The golf field of Winona has a large number of enthusiastic devotees and the season will be one of great interest.

In the afternoon of Saturday the Winona team will meet the strong Anderson team on its base ball diamond. The "Little Red Men" are anticipating that they are up against a bunch of sluffers and are getting the dust out of their best men.

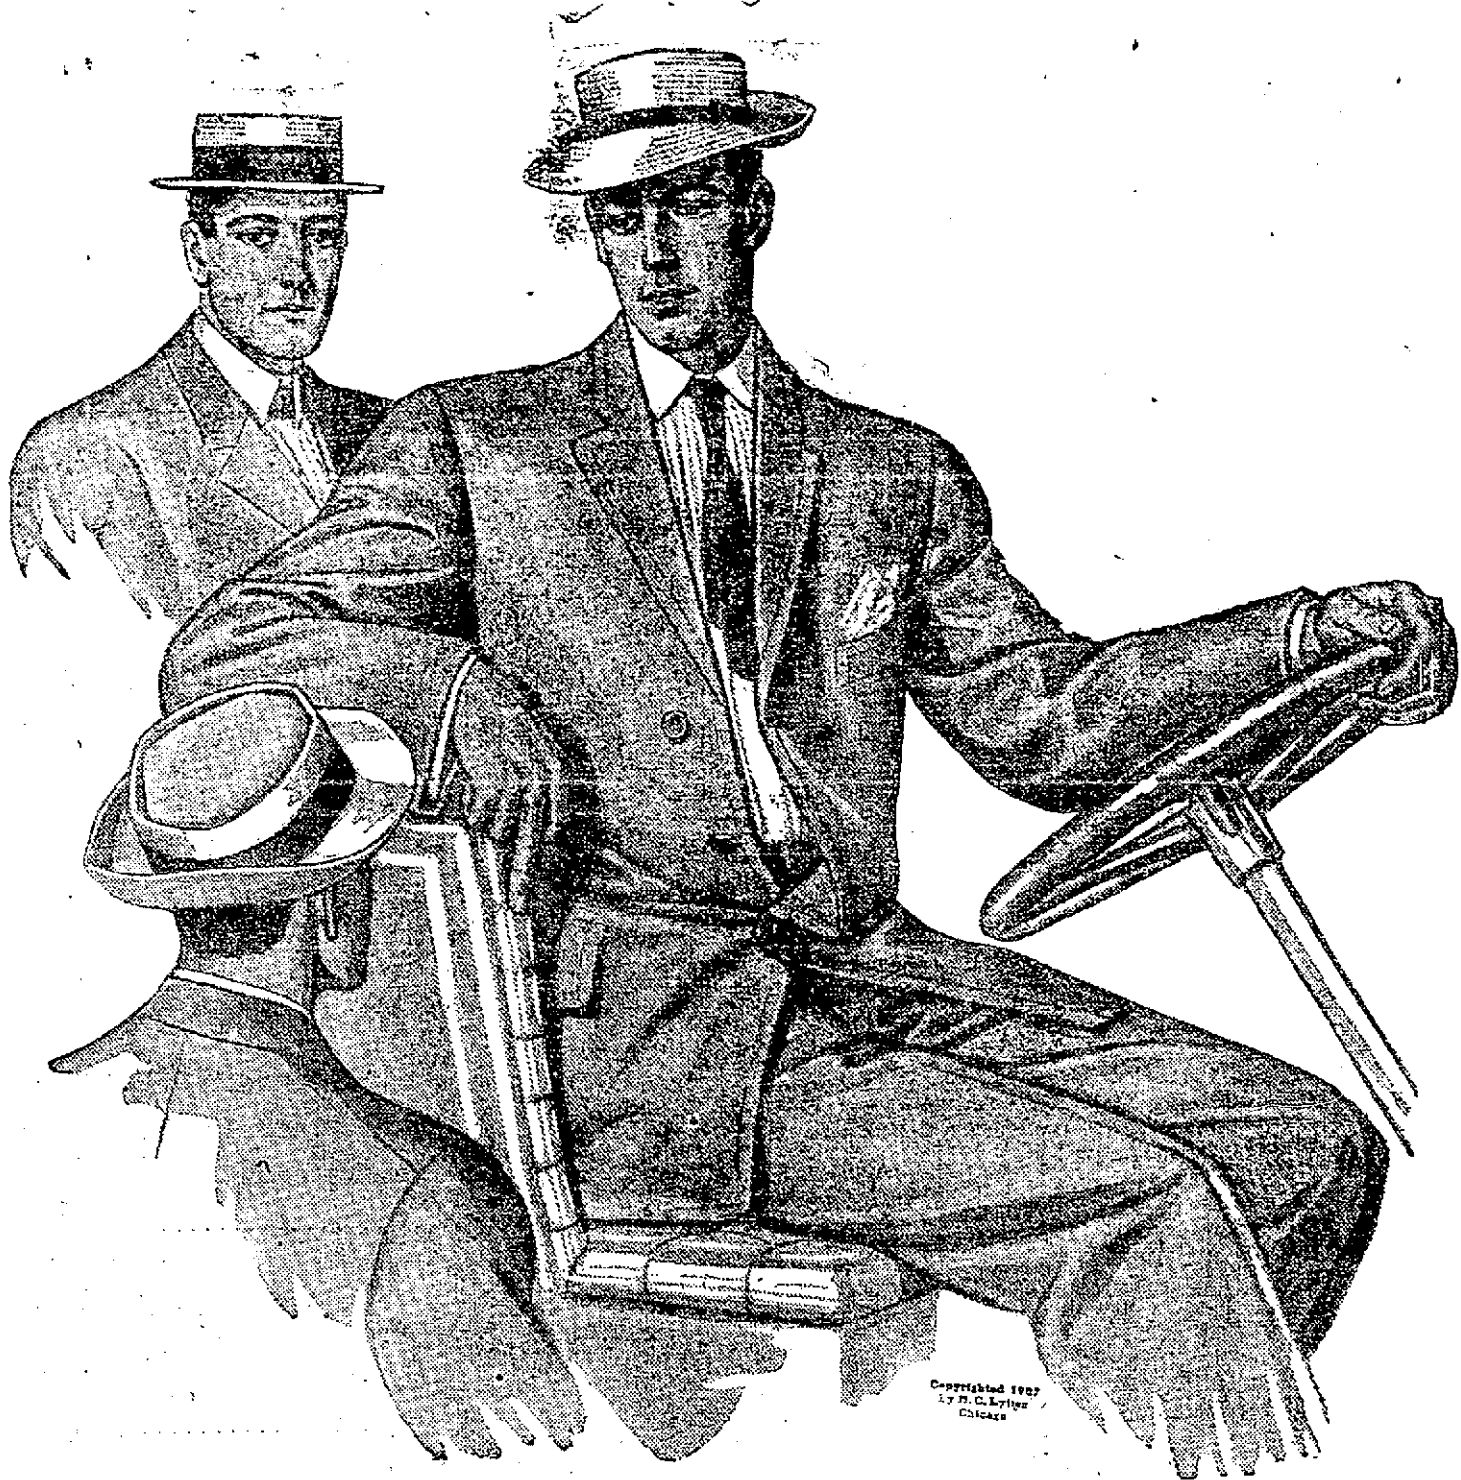

All Winonians are waiting with expectation, yet with assurance of a great lecture Saturday evening, and a blessed day for the Sabbath on the coming of Dr. Frank W. Gunsalus to the Winona platform for the evening lecture and the Sunday morning sermon. Monday as has been noted, will commence the Thomas orchestra engagement, and with the institution of the Winona Boy City when the coming of over 1,000 boys will begin a most notable influx to Boyleville. The week will be a busy one in the field of education. All the departments are filling up beyond the expectations of the teachers and the growth of the Winona educational movement is the comment of the friends of the institution.

October always begins on the same day of the week as January, April as July, September as December. February, March and November begin on the same days. May, June and August always begin on different days from each other and every other day of the year. The first and last days of the year are always the same. These rules do not apply to leap year.

CABBAGE SALADS.

When celery is unobtainable in the summer a little crisped cabbage may be used in combination with veal or chicken in a salad. It also combines well with salmon, tomatoes, lobster, cucumbers, sweet peppers and shrimps. When cabbage is to be shaved or chopped for cold slaw or salad, it should be laid in cold water for an hour or two first to get crisp. Dressed with lemon juice and the best olive oil it is much more delicate and digestible than when vinegar is used. Another excellent dressing for a cabbage salad is made in this way:—Chop or shave fine a medium sized head of cabbage that has been crisped and season to taste with salt and pepper or paprika. For the dressing, beat the yolks of two eggs, add two tablespoonsful melted butter, and beat again. Add a tablespoonful thick, sour cream, two tablespoonfuls sugar, half a cup vinegar and a sprinkle of mustard and beat until thoroughly incorporated. Pour over the cabbage and mix.

WILLIAM JANUARY IS RELEASED FROM PRISON.

seek the goal which he has held in sight through all the years of suffering.

January, who is prisoner No. 308, was sentenced to Leavenworth for breaking into a general store, in which was a postoffice. He was convicted at Stillwater, Okla., Dec. 10, 1895. Oct. 9, 1898, he and another convict named Axton, escaped from the prison, located at Fort Leavenworth.

Missouri Aids Him.

After his escape many newspapers urged that the president be petitioned to pardon January. Members of the Missouri house of representatives, the Kansas City board of trade, chamber of commerce, labor organization members and others signed the request, and the president referred it to the department of justice, recommending that the sentence be commuted immediately.

Attorney General Bonaparte, not wishing to encourage prisoners to escape, recommended as a compromise that the sentence be commuted to three months from the date of his arrest and that January be then pardoned. This was approved.

What January will do when he leaves the prison has not yet been decided by him or his wife. It is said a Kansas City merchant wishes to start him in the tailoring business; or that he may sell coffees and teas, at which he was successful after he escaped from the prison. He has not intimated his desires, but that he will reside in Kansas City, the city which came to his aid and saved him from a prison sentence that would have expired June 21, 1909, is fully decided.

At 7 a. m. January will be free to leave the prison and face the world. His wife, who has stood by him so nobly, though she did not know his record before their marriage, will come here with their child, and, accompanied by friends, the family will return with him to Kansas City. Report has it that a reception will be given to him there, but the nature of this has not yet been made known.

If January desires he may leave the prison in citizen's clothing made in the prison tailor shop. Every discharged prisoner is given a suit of clothes, good underwear, socks, shirts, collar, necktie, hat and shoes; in fact, he is completely outfitted and given transportation to the place from which he was sentenced. In this case it would be to Stillwater, Okla., but January only asks it to Kansas City. It is said January's friend, a Kansas City tailor, who first circulated a petition for his release, will send a suit of clothing for him to wear from prison.

Didn't Want a Parole.

When January was returned to the prison, the newspapers published many stories relative to his excellent behavior, and Warden R. W. McClaughry, after a talk with the prisoner, made the following recommendation on January's record sheet:

"In view of the commendable life led by January, No. 308, while he was an escaped prisoner, a full account of which I have just had from him, I feel warranted in directing that he be relieved of his striped suit and be clad in the gray prison garb."

All "escapes" are given striped suits on their return, while well-behaved prisoners wear the gray and paroled the chalk blue. A well-behaved convict has the privilege of asking a parole, which permits him to sleep in a dormitory instead of a cell-room, and eat at a special table. January was given a parole application blank by Deputy Warden Lemon. It has certain questions to be answered and an oath is given to not run away. January returned the blank, stating that he did not care to sign it.

January's home is in Chillicothe, Mo., where a brother and his aged mother reside. The brother recently called upon him. The prisoner pretended not to know him. The brother asked January why he had not come home or sent word where he was, but the prisoner only hung his head as if in shame.

William January is the prisoner's right name, and the probabilities are that he will again assume it upon his release. Instead of that of Charles William Anderson. He has no reason now to cloud his identity.

THE RETURN HOME.

January Says He Has No Plans for the Present.

Kansas City, Mo., July 19.—Charles W. Anderson reached Kansas City this morning a few hours after his release from the penitentiary at Leavenworth, went directly to his home, where a family reunion was held. Later when a newspaper man called he found the little group radiant with happiness.

With his four-year-old child on his knee, Anderson talked of himself. "I have no plans for the future," he said, "save that I will remain in Kansas City. I am just glad to get back to my wife and my baby."

"We're going to build that swing this afternoon, aren't we daddy?" interrupted the child, and Anderson smiled and said, "you bet we are."

"The wife and the baby are so glad to see me back, and it's like getting acquainted again," he said to the reporter.

Asked about the report that he would engage in the pool ball business, Anderson said it was without foundation.

"I would not," he said, "be so ungrateful to the many who signed for me."

NEW TESTING STATION.

Central Union Will Install It North-east of Fort Wayne.

Manager E. L. Taylor, of the Central Union Telephone company, announced today that his company will at once install a long-distance testing station four miles northeast of Fort Wayne, where the Kalamazoo-Indiana telephone lines cross the wires of the Chicago-North Baltimore line. These lines will also be looped into Fort Wayne, giving this city direct access to the trunk wires of the company.

TWO DROWNED AT LIMA, OHIO.

Lima, O., July 19.—Boating on McCullough's lake last night, J. L. Davis, a well known young man, and Miss Docia Vebryke were drowned by the capsizing of their boat. The bodies were caught in the lake under weeds and the fire department worked all night dragging the lake, recovering the bodies at daylight. Miss Vebryke was well known in social circles. The two are said to have been engaged, with the wedding only a short time distant.

STRIKE TIES UP BIG MINES.

Duluth, Minn., July 19.—Mining operations on the Mesaba and Vermilion ranges are at a standstill and the fleet of the Pittsburgh Steamship company promises to be tied up as a result of the strike of ore dock laborers at Duluth, Superior and Two Harbors. Nearly two thousand men in all are out as a direct result of the strike, but thousands of others are forced into idleness.

A PASTOR'S ELOQUENCE PROVES HIS OWN UNDOING

Sermon Moved Woman to Confess Her Relations With Him.

Lincoln, Neb., July 19.—Disgraced by the force of his own eloquence, Rev. W. P. Ferguson, pastor of the First Methodist church of University Place, a suburb, was suspended from the church yesterday for illicit relations with Mrs. Jane Cross, a member of his congregation, with whom he boarded.

Last Sunday morning Mr. Ferguson delivered one of the most powerful sermons which his congregation ever had heard. His subject was pure living. With all the force and eloquence that years of pulpit speaking—he is 50 years old—had taught him, Mr. Ferguson appealed to the men and women of his flock to live clean lives. That, he said, was the first duty of every person. He dwelt on the misery caused when mothers and fathers departed from the path of virtue.

Mrs. Cross was in the congregation. Like his other hearers, she was deeply moved. She went to the members of the church board the next day and confessed that she and Mr. Ferguson had been guilty of the very offense which the pastor had warned his charge against. It was the erring minister's own sermon which had induced her to confess.

Seven Methodist clergymen from nearby churches were called together and a two-days' trial was held, which ended yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Cross was determined to conceal nothing. She said the pastor had won her affection, and that she was unable to resist his advances. She admitted she had accompanied him in hotels, and had improper relations with him in her own home as well. Even the pastor's study, Mrs. Cross testified, was not free from taint.

Decides to Reveal All.

When she heard Mr. Ferguson's sermon Sunday, she said, she realized the significance of her conduct and determined to make what amends she could and expose the man who demanded clean lives in others.

Milton Burke, cashier of the First National bank, and Mrs. Josephine Brown, general secretary of the Young Women's Christian association, also testified corroborating much of Mrs. Cross' confession.

During the early '80s Mr. Ferguson was a minister in New York city. For five years he was president of the Centenary College institute at Hackensack, N. J., and later he was pastor of a Newark church. He spent several years in Los Angeles and Redlands, Cal., before coming to Nebraska a year ago. For many years he occupied a prominent place in the Methodist ministry.

FRED C. MILLER YIELDS TO DEATH AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Was Well Known as a Mason Contractor—Other Mortuary Notes.

Fred C. Miller, a well known mason contractor, residing at 1107 East Lewis street, died at 5 o'clock this morning at St. Joseph's hospital after an extended illness. Death was due to malignant stomach trouble, and an exploratory operation performed some time ago revealed that the case was a hopeless one.

Mr. Miller was born and reared in this city. He was 38 years of age, unmarried, and was a son of the late Fred Miller, whose death occurred little more than a year ago. He was in partnership in the contracting business with his brother, Harmon Miller, the sons succeeding the father in the business.

Surviving relatives include the mother, Mrs. Louisa Miller, two brothers and three sisters—Harmon and Charles and the Misses Emma and Alma Miller and Mrs. R. Gerberding.

Funeral services from the residence Monday afternoon, conducted by Rev. J. W. Miller. Friends may view the remains Sunday afternoon and evening.

FUNERAL ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Schele.—Owing to the fact that repairs are in progress at St. Mary's church, the funeral services of John H. Schele will be held Saturday morning at 9 o'clock from St. Peter's Catholic church. Rev. Father Hartman, of Cleveland, a brother of Mrs. Schele, will celebrate the requiem mass, assisted by Rev. Gustave Hottenroth as deacon and Rev. Norbert Feiden as sub-deacon. Rt. Rev. Mgr. Oechtering delivering the sermon. The pallbearers will be Messrs. August Hillek, William Hillek, Joseph Aman, Henry Kohrman, sr., Louis Brame and Peter Mettler.

THE MARKET TODAY.

This has been the dulllest day in market circles for a long time and there was practically nothing done this morning on the market square. This fact is due to the busy season which the farmers are now encountering. Wheat and oats are ready to be cut now and it seems as if all things were coming at once upon the farmer.

New potatoes went up five cents to the bushel today and the receipts were very light. Even Chicago is getting but a small amount of this article. There will be a greater demand on new potatoes than can be supplied and the prices will fly skyward.

SENSATIONS GIVEN TO THE PUBLIC IN HAU CASE.

Dr. Dietz, counsel for Hau, then asked the court to read a letter which Mrs. Hau had written him from Zurich, regarding her last interview with her husband, which took place in prison June 7. Mrs. Hau wrote this interview was rather unsatisfactory and exciting. "We were near to having hysterical attacks," she said. She referred to her husband as a weak man. "Stand by him," the letter read, "and bring pressure to bear on him."

Hau Makes Statement.

At this point Hau arose from his chair and asked the permission of the court to make a statement. Speaking slowly and in a very low voice, the prisoner said his wife had told him at this interview that she intended to commit suicide because she was unable to hear all her family matters discussed before the public. He tried to persuade her to desist from this purpose as it would create an impression that he was guilty. After she left the jail he had a telephone message sent to Herr Dietz telling him to take steps to prevent Mrs. Hau from taking her life.

Hau made this statement without any emotion; during the entire pathetic recital of his wife's death his composure was complete.

Herr Dietz then said he had telephoned to Baden Baden and tried every means to communicate with Lina Hau, but without success. Mrs. Hau had told him some time before this that she was carrying poison, and intended to take her life.

Louise Molitor, a sister of Lina, who lives in Munich, testified that Lina, after her elopement with Karl, had told her in the strictest confidence that she and her husband planned to commit suicide. It was on this understanding that Karl shot her, but the first bullet was not fatal.

She then requested Karl to fire another shot, but his courage failed him and he would not. Before the Swiss officials who investigated this occurrence, the sister testified, Lina swore that she had shot herself. This she did to shield her husband from punishment.

Japan Breathes Easier.

Tokio, July 19.—(Evening.)—While much sympathy is expressed here with the Korean emperor who has retired, the public is breathing easier for the sake of both countries now that the arch intriguer has been completely disarmed.

It is confidently expected that hereafter the relations between Japan and Korea will be smooth.

Unqualified admiration is felt for the capacity of the ministers of the present Korean cabinet in effecting the solution of a most aggravated situation without the shedding of any blood and in a manner evincing more than ordinary moral courage.

It is felt here that the commotion among the populace at Seoul is not actuated by the spirit of true loyalty to the retired emperor, but out of fear of the adoption of the drastic measures by the Japanese government toward Korea as a nation and until the pacific intention of Japan is fully understood some agitation is naturally anticipated.

The ceremony of abdication, it is expected, will assume the form of a rescript transferring the throne to the late emperor's successor.

The date for the coronation of the new emperor has not been fixed.

Reports from Seoul are silent on the action Marquis Ito is likely to take after the rescript transferring the throne has been issued, but no doubt he will do his utmost to placate the excited populace.

Speculation is rife among foreigners here as to the origin of the idea of pressing the abdication of the retired emperor of Korea.

It is definitely known, however, that Marquis Ito was only a silent spectator of the event, and that the idea originated with the premier, Marquis Sainji, strongly supported by the ministers of agriculture and justice, both of whom are strongly in favor of a life of exile in Japan for the retired emperor.

Some thought that blood must be shed before the abdication of the throne would be effected, but fortunately that expectation was not fulfilled and the aftermath is also likely to prove less serious than present occurrences at Seoul might indicate.

It is believed the wisdom and resourcefulness of Marquis Ito will prevent the spread of any agitation likely to menace the general peace of Korea.

UNWRITTEN LAW PLEA FREES A WOMAN SLAYER

Governor of Mississippi
Pardons Mrs. Birdsong,
Who Killed Doctor.

Jackson, Mich., July 19.—Governor Vardaman yesterday, over the protest of 1,000 of her neighbors, granted a full and unconditional pardon to Mrs. Birdsong, who was convicted of the killing of Dr. Butler in Copley county a year ago. The pardon was based practically on the unwritten law.

The governor gave both sides a patient hearing which lasted about two hours. Both sides were represented by attorneys. In granting the pardon the governor summed up the case as shown in and out of the records. He referred to the fact that Dr. Butler had been the family physician and indicated such a position gave him certain influence.

The facts show that the physician talked about his relations with Mrs. Birdsong to at least three persons and had shown to another a confidential note which he called a love letter from Mrs. Birdsong, charging and upbraiding him for not coming to see her.

Entitled to Go Free.
"Perhaps some might put it on the ground of his being the father of a woman scorned," said the governor, "but the stubborn fact remains that had it been a man, a male member of her family who shot Dr. Butler for the same offense that man would never have been convicted. This would be admitted by everybody."

Attorney McNair, for the prosecution, suggested that the facts showed that the intimacy was forced upon Dr. Butler, or at least that Mrs. Birdsong was largely responsible for it. The governor said it was just about as the average case, and that the strong man should protect the weak woman.

It was plain that from the first the governor thought the killing of Dr. Butler was justifiable, and that Mrs. Birdsong shot him down for holding her up to public scorn after he had wronged her. As the attorneys discussed the facts shown by the record and also discussed the testimony which was ruled out, the governor time and again asked whether it was shown conclusively that Dr. Butler had talked about Mrs. Birdsong.

Holds Murder Deliberate.
Mr. McNair never said anything derogatory to her character except on one or two occasions and that the statements were never told to Mrs. Birdsong. He undertook in brief to show from the record that the killing was premeditated murder and without justification, that Mrs. Birdsong had deliberately put her pistol in her satchel on the morning of the tragedy and had gone to Dr. Butler's office to shoot him.

It was shown, however, that a few nights before the killing Dr. Butler was drinking heavily and some friends had been called on to take him home. The men, one of whom was the mayor, Mr. Price, testified that Dr. Butler said he did not wish to go home, and indicated as his reason that he had an appointment to keep. He did not mention any name nor indicate to whom he referred beyond the fact that it was a woman.

It was also shown that one of the men who took Dr. Butler home had told his wife of the remark and had connected Mrs. Birdsong's name with it, and that this woman told Mrs. Birdsong of it and asked if she was going to stand it. Mrs. Birdsong replied that if Dr. Butler had made such a statement she would kill him.

Prompt Denial.
"Oh, you're cooked for this robbery all right," said the detective. "You left a strong clew behind you."
"Dat's a lie," cried the prisoner. "De only strong tool I had wid me wuz a slumby, an' I took dat away wid me."—Philadelphia Press.

THE SUMMER ARGUMENT.

A problem of wedlock.
That never is settled.
That makes father mad.
And that gives mother battles;
It comes up each year.
At the summer resort;
Who'll clean the fish
That father has caught?

Mother says that she won't.
Father says that she should;
It is clearly her task.
And is so understood.
"If I catch the fish,
And I had 'em and tall 'em.
It's really your duty
To dig in and scale 'em."

To this mother says.
In a positive way:
"When I clean your fish
It will be a cold day.
You have all the fun,
When you angle and hook 'em.
I'm doing enough.
If I'm willing to cook 'em."

"You're wrong," declares father.
"You swore to obey.
It was one of your vows
On our glad wedding day."
"True," replies mother.
"I'll how to your wish
When the minister says
That I swear to clean fish."

Oh, endless the worry,
And senseless the row!
The summer is here.
They are arguing now.
They want to decide—
And the problem is great—
Shouldn't she clean the fish,
If she digs the bait?

A man who runs a truck farm in Virginia tells of the sad predicament in which a colored man named Sam Moore, who is in his employ, recently found himself. Sam had had considerable difficulty in evading the onslaughts of a dog from a neighboring farm. Finally the dog got him, as Sam kicked at him.

Sam's wife, hearing a tremendous yell, rushed to the rescue of her husband. When she came up the dog had fastened his teeth in the calf of Sam's leg and was holding on for dear life. Seizing a stone in the road, Sam's wife was about to hurl it when Sam, with wonderful presence of mind, shouted: "Mandy! Mandy! Don't throw dat stone at de dawg! Frow it at me, Mandy!"—Youth's Companion.

"And how old are you?" went on Miss Blank in her methodical way.

the park and equip it better than any other base ball lot this city has ever had.

It is also a part of the plans to build a high skating rink down town and connect that enterprise in winter. Mr. Hall says that the skating rink has been taken the east by storm and that even in the days of the old craze more than nine years ago it never had the vogue it now possesses. It is a fad of the fashionable as well as the less pretentious and will strike Joe Wayne, he says, before long. The skating rink will be a success, he says, and will perhaps extend its presence into the west in search of players for the Cincinnati team.

LIMEKILN'S VISITOR.

How Nicodemus Jones Was Introduced by Brother Gardner.

HE SPEAKS ON HAPPINESS.

It's a Subject Dat Consarns de High and de Low, de Rich and de Pore," Says the South Carolina Orator—Es-corts Guest to Anteroom.

Copyright, 1907, by M. M. Cunningham. At the last regular meeting of the Limekiln club Brother Gardner, president, rose in his place after the regular business had been disposed of and said:

"I bet to announce dat de Hon. Nicodemus Jones of South Carolina am in de red antyroom and waitin' to de-ber an address lefo' dis club. De title of de address am 'What Am Happiness?' I don't know what sort of a vator he am, but as he has walked 100 miles to address us I shall give him de chance. He has been a guest in my house fur de last three days, and I kin say dat his appetite am southin' dat a boss orter be proud of. Some great men am satisfied wit' tea and toast, while others want co'n beef and taters every meal. Doorin' de Cellbery of de address I want respectful silence. I don't want no taters or turnips frown round de hall. If Elder Toots falls asleep and wakes up wid a yell or Samuel Shin takes advantage of de occasion to kick Waydown Beebe in de shins dey will hear from me in a way to make deir hearts ache. De reception committee will now bring de Hon. Nicodemus in."

The visitor was escorted in and introduced in ceremonious fashion. There was a general gasp of astonishment at his appearance. He was considerably over six feet tall, while he didn't look much thicker than a clothes prop. There was an ancient look about him to remind one of the pyramids of Egypt, and any keeper of a restaurant would have bet ten to one that he had the hunger of five men. As he bowed and surveyed his audience the impression made was not exactly favorable. It seemed as if nature had created that long, thin, lank form to travel through knot holes into hen-roosts.

He Speaks.

"My freas," began the Hon. Nicodemus, with a sudden drop of his arms as if he wanted to fly far away, "I am wid you tonight to discuss de subject of happiness. It's a subject dat consarns de high and de low, de rich and de pore. We am all strivin' fur it, but thousands of us am discouraged because we think we don't find it. We begin, when as children, to believe dat it takes money to be happy, and de older we grow de mo' we believe in dat theory. Right dar am what we make de great mistake of our lives and go off in de wrong road."

Here the orator paused for his words to sink two feet deep into the minds of his hearers, and then with a jump sideways and back, as if to escape the teeth of a lion, he resumed:

"In a house not a mile from yere sits a millitary. Dar am rugs on de floor; dar am paintin' on de wall; dar am servants to wait on him; he has got a bar'l o' money in de bank; he has no mother-in-law; he don't have to put up or take down stoves. He has but to ring a bell and a pair of sorrel horses and a landoo will come prancin' around to ride him out. Let him ring another bell and a nigger loaded down wid champagne and quail on toast will appear. A third bell, and seven state senators will enter by de back door and offer to beat or pass any bill he may name and not charge him a cent."

"Dat's de picture, my freas, and you have only to shet your eyes to call it up befo' you. Seems to you dat man orter be jist shoutin' wid happiness, but am dat de case? Fur, from it. On de contrary, he am wishin' he was dead. Why? Kase his son in college has made a rule o' hisself and am to be suspended. Kase one o' dem sorrel bosses am sick and likely to die. Kase his youngest child has got de croup and may not lth till mawin'. Kase he's baldheaded and got hay fever. Kase de plumber and de ice man have robbed him. I could gin you forty mo' kases, but dese am sufficient. Dar am a cart load of de long green dar, but no happiness."

The orator paused to get a drink of water and kick his legs out to limber them up and then continued:

"Lemme present another picture to you. A mile away am de cabin of a cull'd man. He's blind in de right eye and lame in de left leg. Dar am no rugs on de 'foah' nor 'pictures' on de walls. He might ring forty bells, and no hosses would come prancin'. He might yell till he was hoarse, and he wouldn't git no quail on toast. He hasn't got a cent in de bank, and de frost has killed his garden off. But he sits right dar in his shirt sleeves, wid a beautiful smile on his face. He grins. He chuckles. He laughs. Why hain't he noakin' and sheddin' tears and sayin' dis old world holds no happiness fur him? Why hain't he out settin' fire to some rich man's barn or hamstringin' a cow belongin' to a millionaire? Whydat blandness and contentment?

The Mystery Solved.

"I will tell you why. Watch him. He rises up. He walks ober to de icebox. He reaches in and lifts and grunts and rugs, and, lo, a twenty pound water-milkyon appears: to view—a water-milkyon dat has been reposin' close to de ice fur a long half day. No matter whar he got dat milkyon, it's dar, and it hain't got legs nor wings to git away. No matter whadder de man am a widower and all alone in his world or whadder he am a man of family and has sent his wife and children away fur de occasion."

"Dat milkyon am deposited on de table. De butcher knife has been sharpened on de stovepipe fur de tragedy. It am lifted up. De milkyon am rolled into position."

"Do you hear dat rippin' sound as de knife cuts?"

"Do you see dat smile creepin' ober his face as de angels in heaven might envy?"

"Do you see dat milkyon dunnally fall apart in two halves—dat great big milkyon—dat ice cold milkyon—dat red cored milkyon—such fruit as has made de mouths of kings water?"

"You see it. You see de man draw a long breath and sot down. You see him lift up one of de halves and turn his eyes to de ceiling and begin—begin a feast dat am to stop not as long as dar am ehen an inch of de rind left. Will you tell me dat a pusson has got to look any furdur dan dis fur happiness—fur sich happiness as dey money of de richman't furnish?"

An Outbreak.

Brother Gardner had made threats if silence were not maintained, but that picture was too much. A dozen voices cried out "Yum! Yum!" in chorus, and then a hundred members sprang to their feet and yelled and whooped and shouted for the next five minutes. When the president could make himself heard he ordered the committee to escort the Hon. Nicodemus back to the anteroom and then he said:

"Dat's 'bout how I reckoned it would come out. He's gone on and shown you how a man wid a water-milkyon can be happier dan a rich man, but he's forgotten sunthin'. Dat cull'd man stole dat milkyon from a white man's truck patch, and 'bout the time he has taken three bites of it in comes a policeman and rams him off to de station, and in de mawin' a judge gib him a sentence of ninety days to de island. We will now break de meetin' in two and go home, and arter I have interviewed de Hon. Nicodemus in de alley fur about five minutes, I'll convince him dat de true way to be happy in dis world am to be unhappy a good sheer of de time." M. QUAD.

Full of Knots.

The lanky tramp removed his tattered hat and displayed his intellectual brow.

"Ah, lady," he confided, "I have brains to burn. There is nothing I like better than to tackle knotty problems."

The busy housewife reached for the ax.

"Indeed," she said, "Well, go down to de wood pile. You will find that last lead the most knotty problem you ever tackled during your career."—Houston Post.

Mistaken.

Two honorable members discovered that in the hurry of getting away after a protracted sitting each had grabbed and put on the other's coat. So they repaired to a quiet part of the lobby to make an exchange. Watching the two as they pulled off their coats, a policeman saw shirt sleeved assault at hand, and with all a speaker's authority he cried: "Not here, gentlemen! Not here, please!"—Tattler.

Partners.

"Before I engage you I must tell you my husband is very particular and very cross."

"Don't fear. Between us we'll manage him."—Fliegende Blätter.

His Old Excuse.

"A poor tramp stopped at the door today," said Mrs. Subbubs, "and I gave him a good meal."

"Well, well," sneered her husband, "why did you do that, softy?"

"I just couldn't help it. He reminded me so of you. I asked him if he'd save some wood for me, and he said he was too tired."—Catholic Standard and Times.

The Advantage.

The Optimist—Surely it is worth something to a man to live in a country whar he dare call his soul his own.

The Pessimist—Well, yes. I suppose he can get more for it when he comes to sell it.—Puck.

JEROME AS A WITNESS

LETS OUT SOME SECRETS

In Libel Suit Takes Good Grilling from Hearst Attorney.

New York, July 19.—District Attorney Jerome, in his private capacity as a citizen and plaintiff, was examined for three hours yesterday by Clarence J. Shearn, counsel for William H. Hearst, in connection with two suits for $100,000 each which Jerome began in March, 1906, against Hearst's two publishing corporations, the Star Publishing company and the New York Evening Journal company, for libel.

Shearn got an order for Jerome's examination before the trial on the plea that the district attorney can give evidence now which will make it unnecessary for Hearst to call a number of witnesses whom he otherwise might have to subpoena at great expense.

In the course of the examination it was brought out that one of the contributors to Jerome's reform campaign fund was a Tammany saloon-keeper and another the attorney for a high insurance official. Jerome also admitted in answer to questions that he had made no effort to have some of the flagrant offenders as revealed in the insurance investigation indicted.

Tells Campaign Fund Secrets.

Mr. Shearn asked for the names of the men who sent in contributions to the Jerome campaign fund two years ago, but Jerome replied that he purposely refrained from learning the names of the contributors, so he might honestly be able to say he did not know them. The fund was in charge of Howard S. Gans, one of Jerome's assistants. He did know the names of some of the givers, however. One was Charles W. Morse, who sent five $1,000 gold certificates. "I sent them back," the district attorney said, "because Mr. Morse might be a witness in the Hummel-Doig-Morse affair. But I meant no reflection on Mr. Morse, who, so far as I know, is a perfectly respectable gentleman."

Another giver was a Tammany saloon-keeper.

"I wouldn't mention his name," said the district attorney, smiling, "for it might get him into trouble with some of the police. After the election certain mendacious personal attacks were made on me by persons who sought to force me to divulge the names of the contributors to my campaign fund. For this reason and in order that I might be able to say honestly I was ignorant of the names and amounts I never inquired of Mr. Gans who contributed. Besides I did not want to know when any man came to my office whether or not he was a contributor to my campaign fund."

"Hasn't Mr. Gans got the list?" inquired Shearn.

"He has," replied Jerome.

"He has on Mendacious List."

"Then won't you direct him to give us the list?" pursued the Hearst lawyer.

"I will not do so unless the court orders me to," Jerome answered, "for your own client in this case is one of the mendacious persons I referred to before."

"How much did Samuel Untermyer contribute to your campaign fund?"

"I don't know," was the reply. "I understand he contributed $5,000."

Q.—Did it come to your knowledge that James H. Hyde was implicated in the insurance investigation and that it might call for action by your office? A.—It did.

Q.—Did you know his personal counsel was Samuel Untermyer? A.—

I knew Untermyer had appeared for him.

Q.—Did it not seem to you then it was wrong to accept $5,000 from Mr. Untermyer as a contribution to your campaign? A.—It did not, because I understood Delancey Nicolai was Hyde's counsel in any criminal actions and Mr. Untermyer was my warm personal friend.

Q.—Did Lewis A. Delafield contribute to your campaign? A.—I don't know. I sincerely hope he did, as we are particularly social friends of long standing.

Q.—You are aware he is counsel for George W. Perkins, who had testified as to a $48,000 contribution to the national campaign fund from the New York Life? A.—That all depends on what theory you consider he was counsel.

Private Opinion of Perkins' Deal.

While he himself thought there might be a crime in the action of Perkins in paying back to himself out of the New York Life's treasury the $48,000 advanced for a campaign contribution by Perkins, yet he preferred to have the higher courts decide first whether or not any crime had been committed. He had caused the arrest of Perkins, understanding a habeas corpus writ would be taken out forthwith. The court of appeals subsequently ordered the release of Perkins, holding he had been guilty of no crime in his management of the New York Life's funds.

"And that decision was greatly to your satisfaction, was it not?" inquired Shearn.

"It was not," replied Jerome, "for personally I had always thought a crime had been committed."

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

ABOUT PET DOGS

Boy or girl, don't think that because your pet dog is a dog that he can "eat any old thing and sleep in any old place," for dogs are most sensitive animals and should have care and kind consideration from their young masters and mistresses. There is no truer friend than a good dog, and he should always have the best treatment.

If you have no clean, snug place in a big barn or outhouse for doggie's bed, then you must of necessity build him a little house all to himself. And you must see to it that doggie's house is kept in neat order. And his food should be good, wholesome and in plenty. Feed to him from a clean pan or dish. Doggie's delighting vessel should be kept clean and full of fresh water. During the summer months give him fresh cold water every hour or two. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, so goes the old adage, and if you will observe this rule your dog will not get sick during the hot season. And remember that a dog needs—and loves—water on the outside as well as on the inside. So see that he has his baths. If you have a swimming place in the river or pond, take your four-footed chum along and watch him enjoy his swimming.

A dog seems born to comrades a boy; indeed, no boy's life is complete without a dog for a chum. And it is not always the fine-blooded dog that makes the best pet or learns the rarest tricks. The writer has seen the poorest little mongrel strays taken in hand by loving boys, fed, caressed and trained until they became most valued little pets and most affectionate friends.

Never keep your pet dog tied up; it is cruel. If during the dog days he shows symptoms of illness call in some older person to look him over and prescribe a course of treatment—which in the case of well fed and watered dogs is always simple. Unless it is thought absolutely necessary to tie up or muzzle doggie during those scorching days called the "dog-days" allow him all liberty, for often the rope, chain or muzzle will make the dog, so used to sweet freedom of action, quite ill and restless, thus creating a sort of panic among his two-footed friends to whom he cannot appeal in any way save by barking, whining and fighting against his restraint.

But too much caution cannot be observed in the matter of allowing your pet dog to run about with every four-footed Tom, Dick and Harry that happens to come prowling around during the very hot weather, for a fight—which is liable to occur between the pet and the tramp—might result in something serious, for dog bites—even when in dog flesh—might prove very troublesome if not dangerous.

A BATTLE WITH POP BALLS.

BY CHARLES LINCOLN PHIPPS.

"Tell us a story, Grandpa."

The children had gathered about his chair just before they were to take the Special for Stamburgh, and claimed the story as their right. Grandpa had been vanquished so often before by them when they demanded a story and he had tried to avoid telling one, that this time he surrendered without a word.

"What shall it be about, children?" he asked.

"Oh, a true story, Grandpa," replied Edith.

"Something about yourself, some great adventure," exclaimed Paul, who imagined that Grandpa's life, being long, must of necessity have been full of adventure.

"Shall I tell you about a battle with pop weeds?"

"Just the thing," answered Paul, who delighted in hearing about battles.

But Edith asked, "What is a pop weed?"

"The pop weed, my child, is a peculiar product of the prairies of Dakota. It used to grow in great profusion; for, although the Indians had pitched battles with it, their method of combatting it tended to spread rather than retard its growth. It may be said that the pop weed always won in its battles with the Indians. But when the white man came, he adopted another method of combatting it, and by carefully gathering the seed just before it ripened and burning it, he won such a victory that the pop weed is rather a rarity now where once it was a terror. But while this was a more successful method than the Indians pursued, it was neither as picturesque or as painful as a battle with the pop weed which I saw the Indians wage in an early day."

"But what is the pop weed?" persisted Edith.

"Sure enough, I was forgetting that," answered Grandpa. "The pop weed, children, is a very peculiar plant. It grows with a stalk and a head somewhat resembling a cabbage. But the head is solid, covered with a sort of skin that in color and shape resembles a Hubbard squash. The seed of the plant are shut up within this ball and are fine spires that, when they strike one, penetrate the flesh like a needle. The winds of autumn loosened these pop balls from the stalk, and they went rolling over the prairies until they struck a gully or uneven ground, and there they lodged, often piling up into great drifts, behind which buffaloes and cattle hid for protection from the wind in the early days. The pop weed is sure enough so long as it is not in motion, but when it is being rolled along by a strong wind, if it strikes an obstruction so as to give it a resounding blow, it flies to pieces with a sharp pop, and a cloud of the spires fly in all directions. They shoot into the flesh of any animal that happens to be within range and cling and irritate for many days. It is the plant's device for propagating itself and for getting carried into new territory, and it is certainly most effective. But the spires of the pop weed are anything but pleasant to the creatures that are made the common carriers of them against their wills. Cattle will flee in terror before a rolling pop ball, because they have learned by experience how painful they may become."

"And do the Indians fight the pop weed?" asked Paul, anxious to get at once to the exciting part of the story.

"They used to hold pitched battles with the pop weed once a year; but Indians are not so plentiful now as in the early days, and the custom has passed out with the passing of the red men. When I was in Dakota in the sixties, I attended one of these battles, for it was made a festival by the Indians. The object of it was to prove the hardihood and endurance of the Indian boys. Hundreds of Indians and white people were gathered on a great plain, and a mass of pop balls were piled at one side of the plain, in charge of some of the braves. Near the other end of the field were about a dozen Indian boys, ranging in age from 10 to 15 years, all stripped naked except for moccasins and breech cloths. However, each of them carried a blanket on his arm. A brisk wind was blowing from the pile of pop balls toward the boys. When all was in readiness, a dozen pop balls were thrown lightly forward, and, gathering the wind, they went rolling toward the boys, going constantly in speed. The youngsters advanced to meet them, each bearing a club, and each trying to cover himself with the blanket. As the pop balls came within range, the boys dealt them blows with the clubs, causing them to explode and scatter their spires in a cloud of minute arrows. In spite of the blankets with which the youths tried to protect themselves, hundreds of the spires shot into their flesh, and in the nerve place of the sun they most have given intense pain. However, the game was for the purpose of proving the endurance of future warriors, and again a volley of balls was swept toward them, again they struck and exploded them, again the smoke of the arrows enveloped them, and now blood was sweeping from a thousand minute wounds on the faces and bodies of the small braves. Then came a third onslaught of the tumbling bombs and a fourth. It was too much for most of the contestants, who deserted the ranks of the aggressors and came forward for treatment, covered with gore. By this time the blankets were so full of the pop weed needles that they were no protection, but, any way they might be damaged, and little arrows into the flesh of the youth. One of the boys threw his blanket aside and stood forth to meet the next onslaught, practically naked; then another, and another, until all were stripped for the final contest. An unusually large number of balls were loosed for this final test of endurance, and the usually stolid Indians grunted with approval as they saw the boys preparing to meet their enemy without a shield.

"Grandpa, what became of the boys who had deserted?" asked Paul.

"They had missed the prize."

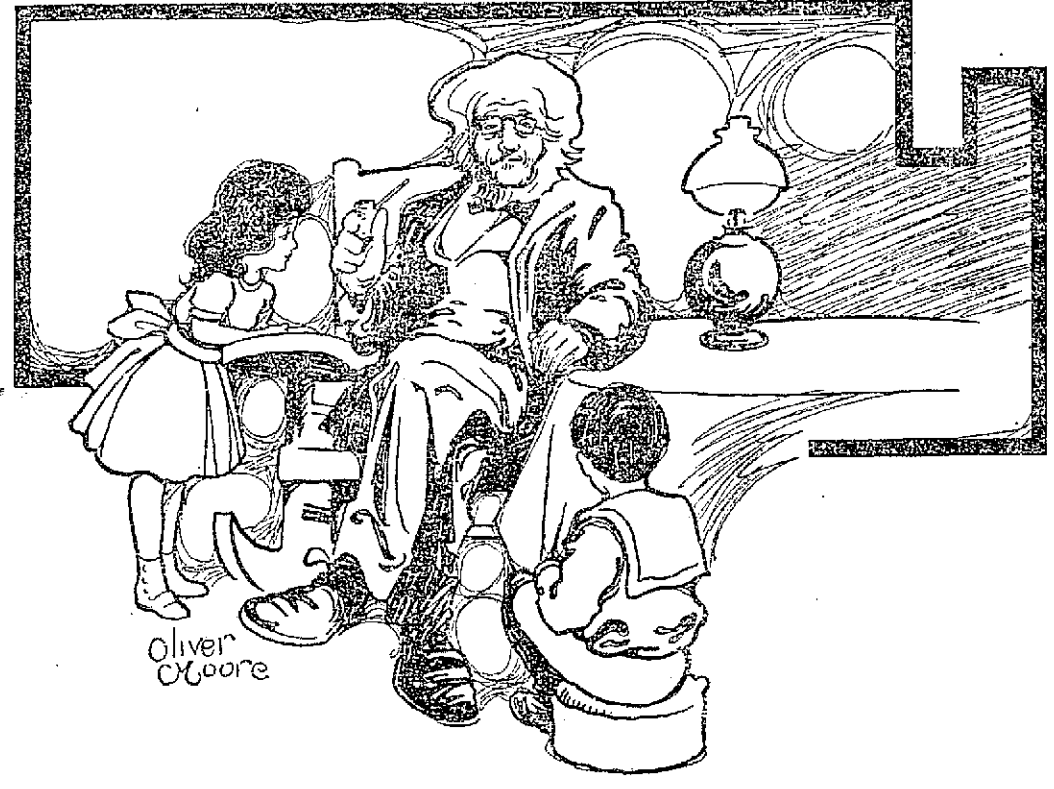

"And what was the prize?"

"Some trade at the time, but ultimately it meant that they had proven themselves unworthy to become chiefs; for, you know, that savage people place great stress on the power to withstand pain."

"Well, the boys rushed at those approaching pop balls with something like frenzy. Each of the three still on the ground seemed intent on smashing the most balls. For a time the reports of the exploding balls sounded like an American observation of July 4th, and the flying arrows looked like smoke. But the time the youths were hidden in the clouds of spires by which they were enveloped. When at last the pop balls had all been met and exploded, and the boys came flapping and staggering to the neighborhood of the lookerson, they were indeed red men, being covered with blood from head to foot. And which of the three who endured to the end of the battle do you suppose received the first prize?"

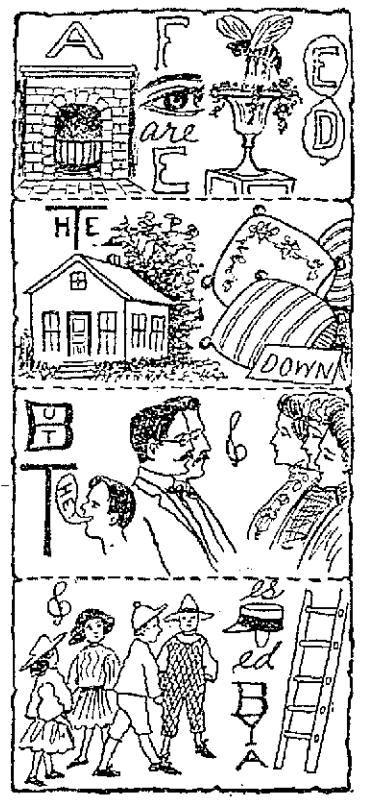

"The one who was bloodiest," I suppose, answered Paul.

"It would have been hard to decide which was the bloodiest," resumed Grandpa, "for all were badly wounded in the one-sided battle; for you must remember the pop balls only furthered their natural purposes of propagation as they were exploded. I suppose that in this battle over a hundred acres had been hopelessly seeded with the pests. But there was another test left that was to determine which was the winner of the pop battle. The exertion in the fierce heat of the last part of the battle had caused the youths to perspire freely, and now the pain from their wounds was well-nigh unendurable. Two of the boys could stand it no longer, but put themselves in the hands of their friends to have the small arrows picked from their flesh one by one and to be rubbed with a salve which the Indians had prepared in advance. The third proudly declined this assistance but walked forth bearing still the arrows until nature should cast them out by festering. They say he became nearly dying, and for many days was a loathsome sight with his body filled with sores. But at last he recovered, all marked with the irritating wounds, and became a recognized leader, a candidate for chieftainship. Of course, children, these crude people had missed the wiser way, because in trying to conquer the pop weed they had really given it, through lack of wisdom, the power of conquering their land, and then, they were expiring themselves to pain and danger unnecessary, which is certainly foolish, yet the endurance they developed was a great quality and I need hardly tell you that the youth who won the honors in this contest afterward won wide reputation as a warrior. You would recognize him as a terror to the white people if I should mention his name."

"Why, who was he, Grandpa?" inquired Paul.

And Grandpa said: "He was afterward known as Sitting Bull."

The Useful Doll.

Edna and Selma were having tea in the shade of the old apple tree. Play tea, it was. In reality the menu was sliced apples, uncooked and decidedly unripe, and water. Edna, the visitor, the guest of honor, held a new wax doll, elegantly gowned, and anon she would instruct the young lady as to the proper table manners. Selma, the hostess, had a doll on a chair by her side, but it was far from new. The fact is, Arabella May had been left out doors all night in the spring by her fond, but rather forgetful, mother, and the hard rain that had fallen had washed all color from her face and loosened the glue that held her hair in place, so that she was totally bald, with a great hole in the back of her head, and with pallid lips and cheeks.

"Arabella May is not at all well," explained Selma. "The poor dear took such a frightful cold the night I forgot and locked her out in the rain."

"You careless woman!" exclaimed Edna. "You surely didn't leave that delicate child out in the rain all night?"

"Isn't it a shame!" cried Selma, catching Arabella May in her arms and giving her a good hug.

"And to think that the sweet little dear braved those dangers all alone in the night, and proved herself a hero."

"You mean a shero, of course," corrected Edna. "Tell us all about it, just as she told it to you."

By "us" Edna meant to include her own doll. There are people who say dolls cannot talk unless they have a phonographic attachment, but little girls know better. They understand their dolls, just as mothers understand the go-goos of their babies, that to the average man mean nothing.

"Now sit still, Sweet Marie," continued Edna, as she carefully arranged her own bright doll by her side. "See what a shero Arabella May proved herself to be, and try if you can be like her. Only do be careful and don't get your paint washed off," she added as an afterthought.

"Yes, the poor dear was so frightened when she awakened and found herself out doors and it was dark," began Selma. "But what could she do? There should be to lie alone while the thunder was rattling and the lightning rolling up the sky—just like Grandma wrinkles her forehead—and lights everything in a flash, and the wind stirred the trees and made the leaves sound just like whispering, while the long limbs bent down like they were alive and wanted to get Arabella May. Give, give, give.
Either your life or a song;
Be brave in the night,
Ready to die for the right,
And so you will live
Ever and ever so long.

Sweet, sweet, sweet
Is service, and very high;
And all things that are
Are surprisingly fair;
But most beautiful, most complete,
Are they who for others die.

And the voice of man has not told
The deeds that cause earth to glow,
And the hidden thoughts that are gold.
God knows, though we may not know,

WAS NOT AFRAID.

Once there was a tyrannical king, who gave 50 pieces of silver to every barber who shaved him well. But the barber who drew a drop of blood on him during the process of shaving was executed immediately. One day he employed a new barber who shaved him very successfully. After the ordeal the king asked: "Were you not afraid, barber, that you'd draw a drop of blood on me?" "No," answered the barber. "I had I done so I would at once have cut your throat."

RAISE OWN DAIRY COWS

By Saving Promising Heifers, Farmers Can Improve Their Herds to Any Degree.

W. M. Kelly, New York.

MANY farmers feel that they ought to make an increase in their herd, but the lack of means to put good cows even though such are for sale. Their case is by no means as bad as it might be for they have the best source of increase right in their own dairy.

Of course this is not immediately available, but for that reason it may be all the better for many a man who finds a few cows very profitable to keep, thinks he would do better with many, and if the cash is at hand he buys without sufficient forethought as to the provisions he is able to make for the increase in number.

Sometimes he finds himself woefully long on cows and short on pasture before the summer is ended, or if he makes the change in the fall or later, he may find himself crowded for room or lacking in forage before warm weather comes to his relief.

None of these misfortunes can trouble the farmer who saves his promising heifer calves to stock up his dairy, for the increase is gradually giving him time to make proper provisions for the enlarged herd.

The man owning a few extra good milk cows can by breeding them to a sire of some good dairy strain be sure to get some heifer calves, these will undoubtedly inherit the milking qualities of their progenitors, and in some cases they may even surpass their dams in productive capacity, particularly if these be but grades and the sire be a full blood.

We cannot assume that every heifer calf will develop into a model of dairy qualities, but if any seem to be wanting in the form which is typical of the female of the breed to which they belong that one may be discarded. As a farther aid in determining the future value of the calf as a milk cow, special attention was given to the mirror of escutcheon and to the number of the embryo teats, preference being given always to the one showing five or six teats and an escutcheon extending forward as nearly to the limit as possible.

The mirror or escutcheon is that portion of the cow's skin which is covered with soft hairs growing upwards from the udder and terminates where these hairs meet others growing downward.

These calves, being selected for a purpose, may be fed and cared for by care in breeding. No infallible rule for producing the sex desired in animals has yet been made public, but it has been recommended that if birth has been given to a female, if the same sex is again desired, then copulation should not be allowed at the period of the first heat following the birth, but may be permitted at the second or fourth or any alternate heat thereafter.

There is one thing more in raising one's own cows, an advantage which is often lost sight of, and that is, that the calves may be petted and fondled from their birth and thus become so used to being handled that none of the much dreaded breaking in is necessary when the heifer brings her first calf and she will have no objection to being milked, but will yield with apparent pleasure to that operation.

It may be argued that heifer calves may each year be in the minority. This may be obviated to some degree by care in breeding. No infallible rule for producing the sex desired in animals has yet been made public, but it has been recommended that if birth has been given to a female, if the same sex is again desired, then copulation should not be allowed at the period of the first heat following the birth, but may be permitted at the second or fourth or any alternate heat thereafter.

THE DESTRUCTIVE CHINCH BUG.

Some time ago Professor Snow, of Kansas, who had been experimenting with fungi in the extermination of the chinch bug believed that he had found a means of exterminating this pest, but recent experiments in Kansas and other states prove that the deadly effect of the fungi on chinch bugs has not been definitely ascertained. It is not believed that chinch bugs do very much harm to corn.

THIN OUT THE FRUIT.

J. H. Hale, the most noted peach grower in this country, tells how his Connecticut neighbors wondered when they saw him picking off the major portion of his first peach crop. They shook their heads and wondered at the absurd proceeding of the man who had peculiar views about peach growing. But that season when his peaches brought in over $10,000 they changed their minds. Since that time the thinning of peaches has been popular with the most progressive of fruit growers.

The thinning of peaches or any fruit must be conducted with judgment. It is not by any means advisable to thin every tree regardless of how much fruit it carries. Some trees set so little fruit that all can be ripened without overtaxing the tree or without producing under-sized fruit.

Some charge up the cost of thinning as an extra expense on the orchard, but anyone who has gathered fruit knows that fruit gathering is a slow task, especially with fruit that has to be handled as carefully as does the peach. The picking of the small green peaches at thinning time removes the necessity of picking off many of these same peaches later on.

When they are thinned they are simply pinched off and allowed to fall on the ground, while later if allowed to ripen they must be put carefully in baskets. The expense of time in pinching off a small fruit is only a fraction of that required in gathering the same peach when it is ripe enough to market.

Of course, there is an offset in the fact that some of the young peaches would be switched off by the wind later, but in the main it may be stated that no more labor is required to thin peaches and gather the remainder when ripe than to gather the harvest that results without thinning.

RAISING TURKEYS NOT HARD

Where one has a wide range there is perhaps more money in turkeys than any other kind of poultry. Though tender when small, after they are half-grown the only trouble is that of keeping them located. They thrive on grasshoppers and a single flock will, in seasons when they are a plague do more good in keeping them at bay upon the farm than the entire cost of the food and care given the flock.

But on a small farm, with neighbors near, discussions will be sure to arise, and a large flock of turkeys in a neighbor's cabbage is a serious matter. If you have not the wide meadows, better confine attention to the biddy.

The mammoth Bronze is the most profitable, attaining an immense size and being quite hardy; the White Holland is less inclined to roam. While turkeys as a rule make the best mothers, being quite and not dragging the tiny poults to death, fair success may be had with hens for hatching the first clutch. The second clutch may be left with the turkey to care for. But if she hatches the first it will be very late before she is ready to lay again. Thus the economical way is to draft the hen mothers into service and tempt her to increase the egg production.

Young poults require care very similar to young chicks, only more of it. Guard against chill and dampness. Be shy if overfeeding the first week. Supply food and water as for chicks.

Feed bread crumbs for the first week or two, gradually working cottage cheese into the bill of fare. Let them have the run of a good grass plot in pleasant weather, where they can get plenty of bugs and grasshoppers. As they get older let the mother run with them in the grass through the day. A turkey mother well knows how often to settle down and give the poults a chance to rest; the hen may have to be placed in a coop to avoid tiring them out.

By midsummer they will have learned where the best bugs and weeds are found and care very little about the food you offer. But try to induce them to roost at home by giving a liberal feed at night.

No other class of fowls will forage so well through the summer and autumn. No other will so rapidly and completely transform insects and weeds into the best of flesh.—Belle L. Putnam.

LITTLE NUBBINS OF NEWS.

W. R. Johnson, a peach grower near Rosedale, Kan., saved the crop of a favorite tree by turning the light from a discarded engine headlight upon the branches during the frosty nights of early May. Other peach orchards were saved by burning smudge, causing heavy clouds of smoke to arise during the frosty nights.

Every truck grower of Texas is now required to stamp his name on every crate containing his produce in order that the responsibility for shipping goods below grade will be placed where it belongs.

It is stated that between 6,000,000 and 9,000,000 acres of good agricultural land lies idle in the northern part of Michigan because the railroads will not build into those sections.

Merchants of Alvin, Iowa, got up an egg carnival and offered prizes of various kinds. More than 2,000 dozen eggs were brought in. The largest green egg weighed ten ounces, and a single dozen hens' eggs weighed thirty-one and one-fourth ounces.

The farmers around Chippewa Falls, Wis., who boycotted the beet sugar factories because they would not pay $6 a ton for beets have raised the boycott.

Secretary L. A. Goodman, of the Missouri Valley Horticultural Association, says the loss by frost to fruit growers in Kansas and Missouri amounts to millions of dollars.

Wm. H. Baesking, a wealthy farmer near Ft. Wayne, Ind., started out to blow up stumps, carrying a stick of dynamite in his hand. While climbing a fence he stumbled and fell, and his body was blown to fragments.

The seven-year-old son of Wm. Goodwin, a farmer near West Plains, Mo., was killed while leading a cow to water. The leading rope was twisted around the boy's arm and the cow became frightened and ran away, dragging the child nearly half a mile.

The Milwaukee Jewish Association is colonizing indigent Jews on farms in the northern part of Wisconsin. The first year each applicant for a farm is paid a weekly wage. If the men prove competent they are given a chance to own their homes, but if not are sent back to the city.

Chas. Carter, who calls himself the "Peanut King of Oklahoma," solemnly declares that he raised a goober seven inches long and four inches in circumference. Charlie's imagination is an extremely lively one, or else the soil of his neighborhood is peculiarly adapted to the raising of goobers.

It is said that the packing companies of Chicago have bought $1,000,000 worth of land in Route and Rio Blanco counties, Colorado, which will be irrigated and used for pasturing large numbers of cattle.

The agricultural department has found out what the skunk is good for. It says this interesting little animal is fond of grasshoppers and is one of the most useful of animals. It should be protected by farmers—of course at a distance.

SOUTH'S PRIZE CORN CROP

Good Farmer in South Carolina Raises 202 Bushels Per Acre and Wins $500.

A. J. TINDAL, of Clarendon county, South Carolina, last year raised what is claimed to be the largest crop in the United States, winning the $500 prize in the American contest and also the first prize offered by the legislature of his state given as an inducement for the farmers to enter into the competition.

President McCall, of the Clemson Agricultural College, writes that Mr. Tindal was a member of the first class sent out by the college, and the result of his work shows, therefore, the importance of farm education.

Mr. Tindal has kindly prepared for our readers an account of the methods employed by him in raising this enormous crop. He writes:

My prize acre was selected in a very fertile bottom, well drained, but naturally moist. The top soil, about two feet deep, is a very dark chocolate color, well charged with humus, but sticky and required much labor to pulverize. The subsoil is mixed sand and pipe clay.

The land has been rotated in the following way: 1933, cotton, yield 500 pounds lint; 1934, corn and peas, yield 132 bushels corn and ninety-one bushels peas; 1935, cotton, 1,619 pounds lint; 1936, corn, 182 bushels officially allowed, actual yield 202.41; 1937, to be planted in cotton.

In 1933, 1934 and 1935 fertilizers were applied to amounts varying from $7 to $12 worth per acre each year.

Early in April, 1936, the land was broken with two-horse plows and two-horse subsoil plows run in every row plow furrow. The land was then thoroughly harrowed with spring-tooth and smoothing harrows. A second and deeper harrowing was made immediately with the turn plows and subsoil plows, the land being broken to a depth exceeding twenty inches. Then the harrows were again used to thoroughly pulverize the soil and put in "hot-bed" condition.

Two or three weeks later, on May 7, the acre was again thoroughly harrowed then laid off with a shovel-plow in rows two and three-fourths feet wide and the seed was sown in the lay-off furrow, about an inch apart, to insure a stand.

The seed was covered by running a large shovel-plow in the middle of the rows. This covered the seed and left a furrow to receive the fertilizers, applied in the following amounts and kinds:

500 lbs. C. S. meal (analysis 1 1/2-1-1)

500 lbs. Peruvian (analysis 5 1/2-3-2-3)

400 lbs. high grade guano (analysis 8-4-2-2)

After the application of this fertilizer in the middles the harrows were run across the land and left level and smooth, and no trace of the rows could then be found until the corn came up.

Just as the corn began to appear a weeder was used. About three weeks after planting it was thinned by hand to about six inches in the drill and all weeds, etc., removed. Immediately following the thinning, the corn was cultivated with sixteen-inch sweeps about one inch deep.

About five weeks after planting, the sixteen-inch sweeps were again used to cultivate about one inch deep, and with this second cultivation the corn was laid by.

The latter part of June 400 pounds of nitrate of soda was used as a top-dressing, making a total amount of 2,000 pounds of fertilizers, costing $32.45.

The total cost of the acre of corn, including everything, was $56.55.

The variety of corn used was a hybrid Mariboro Prolific. I have been trying since 1931 to breed a corn with the prolific tendency of Mariboro Prolific, but with a purer white color, a deeper grain and larger ears. Have met with considerable success and have developed a corn very similar in appearance and standard to "Iowa Silver Mine," but somewhat more prolific.

I have no planting seed for sale or distribution on hand.

The bulk of my corn crop is planted in three and one-half foot rows and left about one and one-fourth to one and one-half feet in the drill, which with 500 pounds of fertilizers per acre average about seventy-five to eighty bushels. Where I select my planting seed it is left three and one-half to two feet, and only seed from specially selected ideal ears from ideal stalks is used.

FOR INSTANCE.

We can all tell what the other fellow ought to do. This is right if we can back up our remarks with a few examples. It is the age of illustrated works.

Every man has a code of morals with him. If he breaks one of his own laws he condemns himself to a certain punishment. He cannot escape the scrutiny of the soul.

It is astonishing with what fortitude we bear our neighbor's misfortunes. Cheerfulness is the oil to use on domestic machinery.

Do not take life too seriously. God set us in a little path to run a little way. So go your way and gather as many flowers as possible. There will be work to do—fear not to rest your hands. A chance will come to rest by and by, but in the meantime be happy and make others so.

SUGAR BEET AS FARM CROP.

By a report just received on experiments in some fully places carried out last season, fully confirmed the result of previous trials in showing that sugar beets can be grown most successfully in this country. The average yield last year was eighteen tons per acre and the percentage of sugar superior to the average in German roots. The only question is as to whether the manufacture of beet sugar in this country would be profitable.

A cotton compress with 14,000 bales of cotton at Chickasha, I. T., was burned early in May, causing a loss of about $700,000.

NOTES ABOUT HORSES.

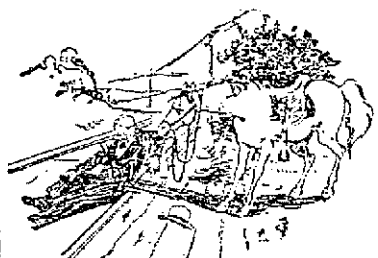

An Oklahoma correspondent wants to know the best way of killing a horse. This is always a bad job at best, particularly where a man really loves horses. The most humane and effective way is by shooting through the forehead, using a large ball.

The price of good horses keeps up well, and the wise men who were not frightened by the automobile hurrahs are reaping their reward. The improvement in farm horses during the past ten years is remarkable. Even in some parts of the South the mule is giving way to heavy horses, particularly on two-horse farms.

The heavy draft horse is not suitable to thin soil. Better stick to the 800 or 900 pound agile animal for such work.

The average farmer makes a mistake when he attempts to breed fancy driving or saddle horses. He must be a thorough trainer as well as breeder to succeed at that.

Don't forget that a fat horse of poor breeding will sell in the big auction markets for a higher price than a lean horse of good breeding.

A HORSE WORTH HAVING.

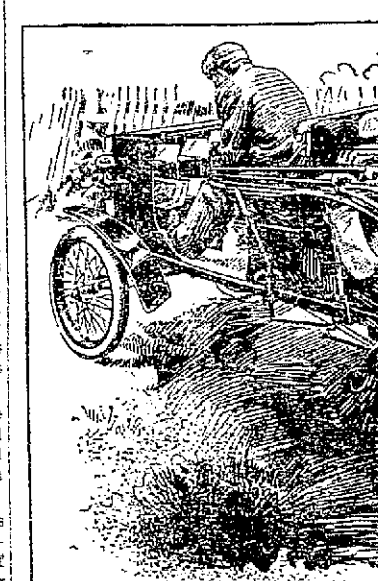

An Ohio farmer while returning home recently was seized with vertigo and fell from his horse on a railroad track. The intelligent animal hearing a train approaching seized his master's clothing in his teeth and dragged him from the train just in time.

WOMAN'S DAIRY WORK IN SUMMER.

Keep the Milk Cool from the Moment It Leaves the Cow.

Never put off churning when the cream is ripe. Gilt-edged butter can not be made from over-ripe cream. The minute it is over-ripe all delicate aroma is destroyed.

No amount of fussing will reclaim butter that is off flavor—poor quality. The churning is not all of the butter making. It is being made from the time the milk is drawn from the cow.

Never put off the work of washing the dairy utensils. Everything should first be rinsed in cold water in order to remove all milk before it has dried. Then wash thoroughly with warm water in which put some salt soda.

Never use a cloth. Always use a good stiff brush.

More germs lurk in an old rag than can be imagined. Lastly, scald thoroughly with boiling water. Steam is best if you have the appliances; if not boiling water is effective.

Then place the utensils, where they will be thoroughly aired and dried. Never put the cover on the churn except when you are churning.

The churn, and all articles, before using should be first thoroughly scalded and then well rinsed and cooled with cold water.

If the worker sticks to the butter-maker, scald again and scour with salt and cold water. Repeat this until it is in proper condition.

Some dairymen recommend rinsing utensils occasionally in lime water.

Remember that no amount of straining or separating can take the soluble dirt out of milk.

Keep dirt out if you value your reputation as the maker of gilt-edged butter.

If you make a success of the dairy business, you must not put a pound of butter on the market that is not of the finest quality—perfect.

Let your stamp be a guarantee of excellence.

Let one person take charge of the milk and attend to the butter-making, and let this be his or her first duty.

The delicate aroma which all well-made butter has is most evanescent, and when exposed to the air is soon lost, especially when it is up in prints or small packages.

NEED MORE GREEN CROPS

Should Have Something to Take the Place of Meadows in Late Summer.

A careful study of the English system of cropping and especially of their green crops for soiling would essentially aid us in carrying our animals well through the summer months when pastures are in poor condition.

The practice of sowing rye and other kinds of early forage for the cows prevails quite extensively in some parts of the East. Clover and alfalfa also affords an abundant supply of good forage for summer feeding and come into use after the rye and before the corn and the last cutting of alfalfa comes at a time when other forage is not available.

Many of our most successful Eastern dairymen who are farming high priced land practice almost exclusively the system of house feeding their cows the year round.

In that manner they are able to keep many more cows on the same amount of land than they could if they made and they produce a much more even quantity of milk at all times in good shape and fit to sell to the butcher and the additional labor of cutting and hauling the feed to them is more than compensated.

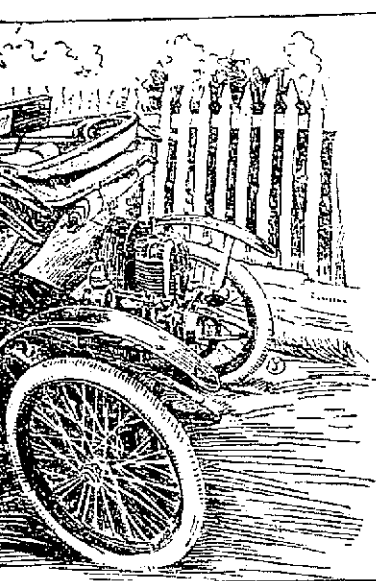

In England the vetches form an important part of the green food for the cattle but vetches are not grown in any part of this country to any extent in account of not being adapted to curing for hay and summer feeding.

There seems no reason why clover, alfalfa, blue grass and timothy may not take the place of English crops used in their rotation for soiling.

THE HIRING MAN'S SIDE.

A friend of mine who is working for a farmer near Dundee, Ill., complains that he has to get up 5 o'clock and work until 8:30. He is thinking of throwing up his job. Well, those are pretty long hours, but I never yet objected to turning out at 5 o'clock during the rush season, and I don't think it is a good plan to watch the sun too closely as it goes down. My boss takes two hours off at noon during the heat of the day and we make it up in the cool of the evening. And that suits me.

A friend told me that he once worked ed as a harvest hand for a farmer in South Dakota. The farmer was a thrifty person and his men on fat bacon and potatoes with wheat coffee—a decoction made by pouring hot water over wheat. This was a new one on me. Although there were more than 100 fat chickens hanging around the place, the family stuck close to fat bacon and never a chicken appeared on the table. The boys all left at the end of the week and I don't blame them.

I am now working for a man whose wife knows how to treat people in a way to make them want to stay on indefinitely. I am not asked to use the family towel, but clean, individual towels are supplied to me as well as other toilet articles. My room is furnished simply, but the bed is good and everything is as clean as soap and water can make it. I do not find these comforts in every farm home, and it may be that is the reason that I have been with this family more than five years.

I don't believe it is wise to take every hired man that comes along too much in the family life. Better try him out a few months and find out what he is like before allowing the young boys and girls to become too familiar with him. I have known boys to be led away from the home farm by the influence of evil minded farm laborers.

If the hired man wants to buy a coat and raise him and train him with his own hand, give him a chance to do so. The girl's feed will never be missed and it gives the man an interest in something that he can call his own and it makes him more cheerful and contented because of the feeling of proprietorship that goes with it.

If the grade will permit it, the water may be brought to the house first, as near to the kitchen as possible. Then it may be conducted to the barns.

If no spring is convenient, a drilled well and a windmill or gasoline engine will send the water to the house upper rooms and all, and also to the barns. The matter of easy access to water is a thing not to be overlooked.

It is also to locate the house near the well, other things being equal, if one already exists. If not, when one is dug, let it be as convenient to the kitchen as possible. Try to make the approach to the house from the well as easy as possible. Think of the tons and tons of water one must lift in the course of a year to carry on the household work. Every pound saved by shortening the distance between the house and the well and rendering the way as easy as possible to travel adds so much to the sum total of life.

If there be a spring within a reasonable distance of the buildings, money cannot be more profitably expended than in piping it down to the house, and better. In laying the pipes, they ought to be put down below the reach of the frost, which in our northern climate means two and a half or three feet below the surface.

sown. He is naturally sensitive upon that point. He may make a mistake in annual crops, which he can remedy in the following year, but when he is laying down permanent pastures a mistake has far-reaching results.

It is the practice of many farmers to obtain their seed mixture by mowing half of a good grass field early and the other half late. Others prefer to place their confidence in a trustworthy salesman, but failure in this respect often occurs through the farmer failing to state what particular seed would be best suited to his land.

The seedsman can supply reliable seed, but he cannot guarantee that it will grow well on every kind of land; hence the importance of acquainting him of the nature of the ground it is proposed to sow in order that he can supply seed especially suited to particular lands.

In other respects, farmers have made great progress in scientific farming, but there seems to be an inherent carelessness in forming permanent pastures. Land is laid down to grass and left to take care of itself. If it turns out poorly it is left idle, little or no attempt being made at improvement. It is essential that a farmer should have a personal knowledge of pasture plants, but there is no department of farming where the element of luck has played so prominent a part.

GOOD SHIPPING WATERMELONS.

Some of the choicest melons grown in the South are such poor shippers that they never reach the Northern markets. The melons shown in (A) picture are (A) Rattlesnake, (B) Kolberg. They are inferior in quality to many other varieties but they have tough, thick rinds which enable them to reach market in better condition than the choicer thin rinds.

In selecting melons for cultivation these rinds should be borne in mind, the thick rinds will stand shipment, but the thin rinds are sweeter and more delicious in every way.

PLANTS WITHOUT WATER.

The United States government is working on the problem of securing a large number of plants that will grow almost without water. In this it is being fairly successful. We have taken it for granted that the semi-arid wastes of the West must forever remain semi-arid. This is not necessarily the case. We are learning from other lands that it is possible for plants to grow without any large amount of water being applied to the roots.

Plants differ greatly as to their ability to get moisture in some way from the air. The air over the semi-arid plains is not so much devoid of moisture as might seem to be the case. The moisture is there, but it is in the form of gases that compose the air. Even in the driest place there is in the air enough elements of water to make a layer of eight feet of water over the soil. Of course but little of this can be condensed at any one time.

If some plants are so constituted that they can take the carbonic acid gas from the air and store it up in their leaves and make seed and fiber out of it, why may not other plants have the power of in some way taking the various elements that form water and producing a moisture of their own. This must be the case with green, thick-leaved plants that grow in the clefts of the rocks in dry places.

S.S.S. A CERTAIN SAFE TREATMENT

S. S. S. is the only safe and reliable cure for Contagious Blood Poison. It is purely vegetable, made entirely from healing, cleansing roots, herbs and barks, and in addition to curing this vile disorder, S. S. S. builds up every part of the system. Mercury and potash cannot cure the trouble; they can only mask it in the system for awhile, and when they are left off the disease returns, usually, in worse form than before, and the patient finds he has damaged his health with these strong minerals, which disease the delicate lining of the stomach, affect the bowels, produce chronic dyspepsia and often set up Mercurial Rheumatism. It will not do to trifle with a disease so powerful as Contagious Blood Poison, for every day it remains in the blood it is progressing toward a dangerous stage, and will in the end get beyond the control of any treatment. S. S. S. cures blood poison in the right way, it goes down into the circulation and removes every particle of the virus. No bad results are ever experienced from the use of S. S. S. It is gentle and pleasant in its action, and forty years of cures warrant the statement that S. S. S. is not only a safe but a certain treatment. BOWSER WRONG AGAIN

Goes Forth to Pluck Huckleberries, but They Are Not Ripe.

LEARNS HE IS MISTAKEN.

It Takes a Farmer, His Son and a Dog to Convince Him of His Error—Wife Is Right Again, but He Will Have His Way.

[Copyright, 1907, by Homer Sprague.]
The Bowser family had finished dinner and returned to the sitting room when he suddenly remarked to Mrs. Bowser:

"Does that cook of ours know beans when the bag's untied or doesn't she?"

"Maggie is a very good cook," was the reply.

"Yes, but it's the same old things over and over again. She doesn't seem to have any head to push along by herself or else you don't care for my appetite."

"To what particular thing do you refer?"

"To the pie question, of course. You know I like a piece of pie after dinner. For the last four weeks we have had either lemon or apple pie. At lunch today at my restaurant I had the most delicious piece of huckleberry pie I ever ate. I was so pleased with it that I took pains to tell the proprietor. He said that the pie was made from berries that had just come in."

"Then he lied to you!" exclaimed Mrs. Bowser. "Huckleberries are not ripe till long after this, and you ought to know it. They do not ripen in this climate until July at the earliest. His pies were made of canned berries, and if you think them so delicious you can have them twice a day from now on."

Called Truthful John.

"Mrs. Bowser, I have been lunching at the same restaurant for five years. I know all about the proprietor. He is called Truthful John. No one ever knew him to lie. Why should he lie to me about huckleberries?"

"I don't know and don't care, but he certainly did lie. You can't find them at the groceries nor with the peddlers. Shall I telephone the grocer to send over a can?"

"No, ma'am, you needn't. I have a better plan. In the first place, you intimate that my taste is so depraved that I can't tell fresh huckleberries from those canned a year ago. In the next, you deliberately charge a benevolent and truthful old man with lying like a trooper. I cannot let the matter drop here. I shall proceed to confound you with the sight of several quarts of fresh huckleberries gathered with my own hands. When you behold them, see them, smell them, taste them, you will perhaps be woman enough to admit your mistake."

"We have no huckleberries in the back yard."

"No? How sarcastic you can be when you try!"

"Then how are you going to show me?"

"Easy as rolling off a log. I will get up in the morning and hike me to the country with a tin pail on my arm, and before noon I will be back with five or six quarts of huckleberries. I will furnish you with living proofs."

"You will simply have your trip for nothing, Mr. Bowser. You lived on a farm all through your boyhood. Think, now! Did you ever gather ripe huckleberries at this time of year? Aren't you thinking of something else—early strawberries, for instance?"

Knew All About Them.

"Does a boy take a pail and go down into a swamp and pick strawberries off of bushes?" he severely demanded.

"No, of course not. But—"

"There are no buts about it. I have either got the taste of a jackass and can't tell fresh huckleberries from canned or there are plenty growing in the country at this season. If I prove my case, I shall insist that you apologize to me and also write a note of apology to Truthful John. As I wish to read up on Alexander the Great this evening we will let the matter drop right here and say no more about it."

"But why not go over and ask the druggist and grocer and butcher?" persisted Mrs. Bowser.

"Because all druggists and grocers and butchers are infernal liars," he replied. "Why should I ask their opinion when I know? Not any. When Mr. Samuel Bowser knows a thing, he knows it, and that settles it."

There was no more to be said, and no more was said. During the rest of the evening Mr. Bowser's face wore a very determined and huckleberryish expression, and he got up in the morning to don an old suit and ask the cook to hunt him up a tin pail.

"So you still persist?" queried Mrs. Bowser at the breakfast table.

"Madam, did you ever know me to let go when I knew I was right?" he replied.

"But to expect to gather huckleberries this time of year?"

"Um! I do not wish any further conversation on the subject."

A quarter of an hour later he was off with a tin pail on his arm. He had to pass three different groceries to reach the suburban car, but he resolutely refused to stop and inquire if fresh huckleberries were in market. On the car three different men asked him if he was going to the country to milk his cow, but he held himself stiffly and refused to reply. At the terminus he encountered a tramp who struck him for a dime. Mr. Bowser passed it over and then blandly inquired:

"You must know the country hereabouts?"

"Like a book."

"Perhaps you can tell me where I can find a huckleberry swamp?"

"I'm your halpin, old man. Just keep right along this road for a mile, and you'll come to what you are looking for."

"And huckleberries are ripe, of course?"

"Yes, and have been for a week past. Yum! Yum! I turned into the swamp this morning and filled up on 'em. Great big fellers there as big as the end of your thumb. You can fill that pail in an hour."

Could Not Find Berries.

Mr. Bowser whistled as he walked on. He also pitied Mrs. Bowser. He also determined that the note to Truthful John should be couched in the most abject language. For once in his life he had met a tramp with some gratitude about him. After a walk of twenty minutes, he reached a swamp opposite a farmhouse and plunged into it. Not a huckleberry greeted his vision, but he knew the traits of the berry. They remained in ambush as long as possible. He found mud and water and mosquitoes and flies, but he was not discouraged. He said to himself that when Samuel Bowser struck the trail of a huckleberry he was a man that never let up. He was still sloshing around when a farmer came down from the house to the road and called:

"Say, old party, what you looking for?"

"Huckleberries," replied Mr. Bowser as he approached the other.

"Huckle—what?"

"Huckleberries. You must know what they are."

"Well, I've seen one or two in my time, but you are making a fool of the thing. In the first place, there is not a huckleberry bush in that swamp, and, in the next, it will be weeks before the berries are ripe."

"I say they are ripe now."

"Oh, you do, eh? Well, I say that if you are looking for frogs come right out o' that. They are my property. Huckleberries! Say, Bill, come down here. Here's an old jay looking for huckleberries at this time o' year!"

Gets a Beating.

In response to his call his son, who was a strapping young man of twenty-three, loafed down to the road and said:

"Dad, don't let him fool you. If he isn't a frog stealer then I never saw one. Come out o' that or I'll fetch you out!"

"Don't talk to me that way," said Mr. Bowser as he quit the swamp and stood before them. "I am no frog stealer or any other stealer. I simply came out here to gather a few quarts of huckleberries to convince my wife that they are ripe at this season."

"Then she must know that she's got a fool for a husband!" said the farmer.

"I tell you they won't be ripe for weeks yet."

"I'll bet his wife knows ten times as much as he does," added the son.

"Don't talk that way to me or—or—"

"Or what?" from father and son.

Of course there was a row. Mr. Bowser did the best he could, but he was their huckleberry. They got him down and sat on him and called him names and rubbed dirt on his bald head, and a dog also came down from the house and bit him, and when he got up to take the road home he was a wrecked man. He had thoughts as he limped along, leaving the battered tin pail behind him, but why humiliate him further? At midnight that night he let himself into the house and passed the night on the lounge. When Mrs. Bowser came down in the morning and saw him she simply remarked that the vegetation seemed to be coming on in a wonderful way, and he uttered a grunt, and the huckleberry incident was closed. No Danger Whatever.

"So the grand jury has indicted your father for violating the anti-rebate law? I hope they won't send him to jail."

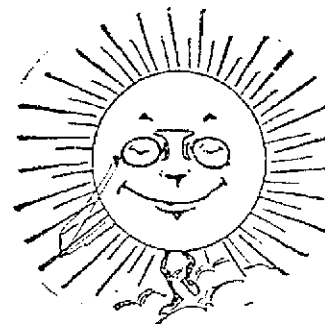

"Oh," the beautiful heiress replied, with splendid confidence, "there isn't any danger of that. Papa is no fool. He has made all arrangements to prove that the rebates were obtained by the office boy while he was suffering with a brain storm."—Judge.

AN EXPERIMENT.

How One in Optimism Caught Mr. Dallington Off His Guard.

Nothing stood in his way now. They had the parlor to themselves.

"It's curious about optimism and pessimism, isn't it?"

"In what way?" she asked.

"Why, for instance, if a man is an optimist things seem to come his way, whereas if he is pessimistic everything turns against him. That is to say, the things we think are going to happen generally do happen."

"Oh, I don't believe in that theory! I've often thought things were going to happen when they didn't, and lots of other things have happened when I didn't believe they would."

"Yes, I know there are exceptions to the rule; but, generally speaking, I think optimism brings the things one is anxious to have. For instance, here we are, Miss Brooke—you and I. Now, I am a thorough-going optimist. I believe certain things are going to happen—certain things which will be profitable and pleasing to me."

"What have I to do with them, Mr. Dallington?"

"Well, perhaps nothing, as far as that is concerned. But here we are, you and I. If I were, as I was saying, a pessimist I would think the things I have in mind couldn't happen. There, you see, is where the pessimist loses out."

"Yes."

"So we are bound to recognize the advantage of optimism, are we not?"

"I haven't noticed them as yet."

"But you will if you make it a practice to be optimistic."

"Just a moment. It may be that I don't quite understand this matter. Now, if—just for instance—if I were to think you would ask me to be your wife, that would be optimism, would it?"

"Er—yes."

"And if I thought there was no probability that you would propose marriage to me, that would be pessimism?"

"You have grasped the idea."

"Or, to put it as you had it at first, what one thinks will happen does happen and what one is afraid won't happen doesn't happen?"

"Of course there may be times when—"

She leaned forward and, whispering, said:

"Look at the curtain."

He looked and turned a little pale. At the bottom of the curtain he saw the tips of two shoes.

"Heavens!" he gasped. "Your father?"

"Sh-sh! Don't let him know that he is discovered."

"Miss Brooke," he said in unsteady tones, "may I have the honor of—will you become my wife?"

"If you are sure you never can be happy without me I suppose I must say yes."

After he had departed she went to the curtain and carefully kicked aside a pair of shoes which she had placed there so that the toes would protrude a little way into the parlor.

"Yes," she said to herself, "the things one thinks will happen sometimes do happen."—S. E. Kiser in Judge.

SHOP AND RAIL

Day's Happenings in the Industrial World

C. E. McKIM WITH LOREE.

Become Superintendent of Car Service of D. & H.

C. E. McKim, who was superintendent of telegraph of the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburgh when L. F. Loree was general manager of the lines, is again associated with Mr. Loree in railway work. He has taken the position of superintendent of car service of the Delaware and Hudson with headquarters at Albany, of which company Mr. Loree is the president. Three or four years ago C. E. McKim resigned his position with the Pennsylvania and engaged in private business. He sold his interests, however, and became general inspector of transportation of the Louisville and Nashville, which position he has left to go with the D. & H.

Mr. McKim will have charge of passenger traffic service, as well as the freight, and that line has an immense passenger business especially in the summer. C. E. McKim is a brother to Supt. J. B. McKim, of the Pennsylvania, and through frequent visits here has a number of acquaintances in Fort Wayne who will be pleased to hear of his advancement.

CHANGED NAME OF STATION.

Winslow Becomes Montdale Sunday, July 21.

A bulletin issued by Supt. J. B. McKim, of the Pennsylvania, that dating from July 22, Winslow will cease to occupy a place in the list of stations on that line and that Montdale will appear in its stead. The change is made to avoid future confusion through a similarity of names.

SITUATION AT BASS WORKS.

Strike of the Moulders Said to Be Practically Over.

The strike of the iron moulders at the Bass foundry is practically at an end and the men who have been out for ten weeks are now returning there or taking employment elsewhere. This morning three of the strikers applied for and were given employment at the Bass foundry, making fifteen who have been reinstated there. Some of the men remain firm in their determination to continue the strike until they gain their point, but their ranks are getting thinner each day. These held the usual meeting at the hall this morning, but so far as could be learned took no action looking towards officially declaring the strike off. There was an absence of the usual picket at the Gay street bridge, the railway crossing and elsewhere this morning. The Western Gas works and the Kerr Murray works have given employment to quite a number of the men who were unemployed because of the strike and these are not likely to return to the Bass foundry.

PENNSY WILL BUY ROAD.

Preparing to Take Over the D., L. & C. Property.

The Dayton, Lebanon and Cincinnati railroad will be taken over by the Pennsylvania in the near future, according to statements made yesterday. A call has been issued for a meeting of holders of $2,000,000 bonds, issued by the former company, which is one of the Appleyard lines, to be held in Cincinnati in the near future to consider plans for refinancing and selling the property.

The Dayton, Lebanon and Cincinnati, running from Dayton to Lebanon, is thirty miles long. At the latter point connection is made with the Cincinnati, Lebanon and Northern, now owned by the Pennsylvania system. Should the Pennsylvania get this property it would have a short line to Dayton, competing with the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton and the Big Four.

WEEK END EXCURSION.

The Pennsylvania and the Nickel Plate have taken out posters advertising their week end excursions to Chicago, Saturday, July 27, and they are being distributed in the usual places. Each line is advertising the excursion in the city papers and will make other effort to get big crowds on that occasion. Tickets will be good returning on the latest trains out of Chicago Monday night, giving the excursionists practically three days in the Windy City. The attractions announced for those days at Chicago are the River View Park, the White City, ball games, Chicago vs. Boston, theaters, etc. On former occasions the Pennsylvania and Nickel Plate took many hundred Fort Wayne people on these excursions and inquiries at the ticket offices indicate an unusual interest in the excursion this year.

NEW WABASH EMPLOYES.

Harry F. Watt, a boilermaker, recently from the Oregon Short Line, and James R. Bevine, a machinist, recently from Moline, Ill., where he was employed by the Rock Island, are new employees at the Wabash shops. H. Pringo, Ed. Armstrong, S. Pongelo, J. Todd and Clem Johnson resigned positions at the Wabash shops this morning.

GEORGE BURNS RECOVERS.

George Burns, the Wabash pipefitter, who fell from the top of a locomotive to the bottom of an engine pit several days ago, is nearly ready to resume work. He left the Hope hospital this morning and says that he will probably resume work tomorrow.

ARM BADLY CUT.

Gus Joecker, a blacksmith at the Fort Wayne Electric works, had a gash over an inch long and to the bone cut on the inside of his wrist at 11 o'clock this morning. He was attended by the company's surgeon. The accident was caused by striking his wrist against a sliver of iron while at work in the shop.

NEW NAMES ON PAY ROLL.

Eight new names were added to the list of employees at the Fort Wayne Electric works this morning. They were Otto Nahrwald, M. Smith, G. L. Youngman, J. Anderson, R. Pape, George Kelsor, Charles Bowers and C. Stimmons. John Walda has been transferred from the receiving room to the cast iron department.

FIREMAN HAS HEAD CUT.

Fireman H. L. Stemen, while out on a run yesterday with Engineer G. W. VanOsedale, was struck on the head by a piece of coal while "putting in" a fire. The scalp was painfully cut and the injury will keep the young man from work for some days.

SHOPS CLOSED TOMORROW.

The Wabash shops will be closed all day tomorrow, with the exception of a small force for emergency work. A good many of the employees will go with the Western Gas people to Rome City and many others will go to other lakes to spend the day in fishing and boating.

INDUSTRIAL NOTES.

Engineer Philip Titus, who had been sick, resumed his duties on the Pennsylvania this morning.

William Harney has resumed his place at the desk in the Bowser works after a two weeks' vacation.

C. F. Fulkerson has retired from a position at the Pennsylvania shops he has held about a month.

Miss Hazel, the daughter of William Donnell, of the Electric works, is quite sick with typhoid fever.

Next Monday E. G. Dornie, of the Pennsylvania machine shop, will go to Detroit for a two weeks' visit.

Blacksmith Peter Huntine, of the Bass shops, is taking a day off to attend to some private affairs.

Master Car Builder J. A. Graham went to Chicago this morning on business for the Pennsylvania company.

After an illness of three weeks, F. J. Brown, a machinist's helper, reported for work at the Pennsylvania shops.

Machinist C. F. A. Smith, of the Bass shops, was unable to report for duty this morning on account of sickness.

Machinist Henry Meyers, of the Pennsylvania shops, has gone up the St. Joe river to fish two or three days.

Tomorrow E. J. Bott, F. V. Scharitz, P. Donnelly and Ben Smith, Wabash shopmen, will go to Chicago to spend a week in seeing the sights. Machinists H. L. Schottemeyer and L. D. Miller will spend Saturday and Sunday in Toledo. Boilermakers E. Claytor and S. P. Lourette will spend Sunday in Chicago.

Ed O'Connor, clerk of the G. R. & I. master carpenter, has returned from a two weeks' sojourn at Lake George.

Martin Miller, formerly employed by Leonard & Geller, has taken a position as patrolman with Capt. H. Stoll, of the Pennsylvania.

W. H. Cornell, a car repairman at the Pennsylvania shops, had a hand injured yesterday and will have to lay off for a few days.

R. V. Sands has resigned a position in the Pennsylvania boiler shop for the purpose of returning to Huntington county to engage in farming.

J. C. Meinert, Pennsylvania machinist, had the index finger of his left hand cut this morning and will be unable to work for a few days at least.

F. H. Miller, Wabash yard conductor, resumed his duties last night. For two weeks he was fishing at the lakes in the northern part of the state.

Earl, the son of Engineer W. D. Gebert, of the Pennsylvania, will go to Pierceton tomorrow for a short visit with friends.

Machinist Allen Hamilton, Harry and Frank Hogan, of the Pennsylvania shops, will attend the funeral of the late Mrs. Robert Barr at Bluffton tomorrow.

Charles Wellman, of the Pennsylvania planing mill, had one of his feet bruised by a car stringer falling upon it yesterday. He will be laid up a few days.

Luther Wright, over eighty years old and the oldest employee of the Wabash in Fort Wayne, has gone to the Peru hospital for treatment. He has been ill and unable to work for a long time.

Pennsylvania Conductor Bert Worman had some fingers pinched and will be off duty a few days as a result of the accident. Brakeman S. F. Bender is off duty on account of sickness.

J. H. McClellan, a boilermaker at the Pennsylvania round house, had his eyes injured yesterday by hot mud from a boiler he was cleaning out. The injury is not serious, but painful for awhile.

Tomorrow the girl students of the Northern Indiana Normal college at Valparaiso will have an excursion to Maxinkuckee, over the Nickel Plate. The girls expect to have a party of at least 500 and the Nickel Plate will give them a special train.

Harry Mallin, of Booneville, Ind., a graduate of Purdue, has taken a position in the signal department of the Pennsylvania. J. C. Vaughn, who has been employed in that department for eighteen months, resigned this morning to go to Oregon to reside.

Mrs. J. W. McCarthy, wife of the Pennsylvania passenger engineer, to Chicago, Fireman E. S. Hoffman and wife to Upper Sandusky; Mrs. J. H. Hanna, wife of the traveling fireman, to Chicago, are some contemplated visits that will be made in a few days.

It was Christian H. C. Kayser who was called to Oklahoma City to the bedside of his son yesterday and not C. W. Kaiser, as stated in those columns. No word has been received from him and it is presumed that his son is still living.

W. D. Meyers, an electrician who since last April has been engaged in helping to install an electric power plant at the ore docks of the Pennsylvania at Ashtabula, is here for a short visit with his folks. He will return to Ashtabula next week to complete the work, which will consume about six weeks.

George Stoll, gang foreman at the Pennsylvania erecting shop, will leave tomorrow upon a vacation trip which will consume a week. He will make rail and lake trip, stopping at Chicago, Milwaukee, Grand Haven and other cities en route. Mrs. Stoll will accompany her husband.

Supt. J. B. McKim, of the Pennsylvania, will enter upon a vacation next

THE WEATHER.

Chicago, July 19.—Forecast for Indiana: Fair to south, showers in north portion tonight; Saturday fair.

CITY BREVITIES.

F. A. Wearing, of Decatur, is in the city on business.

Isador Lehman is home again after a business trip to New York and Boston.

Mrs. Louis Updegraff is rapidly recovering from an attack of pneumonia at her home on Wells street.

John Brouwer is home from a visit in Kansas where he left his wife in Wichita to do further visiting.

Mrs. Charity Bovine was removed to St. Joseph's hospital yesterday from her home, 914 Cottage avenue.

While the improvements are being made in the building of the Citizens' Trust company, that company will probably occupy the former White National bank building.

Three local physicians have been appointed to the faculty of Purdue Medical college at Indianapolis. Drs. J. H. Gilpin, B. W. Rhamy and Ben Perry Weaver are the men so honored.

Thomas Adie and bride, of Cleveland are in the city visiting friends.

Mrs. Adie was formerly Miss Greene, of Ligonier, and has many friends here. Mr. Adie is connected with the White Automobile company of Cleveland.

Charles J. Koebler yesterday got caught in a merry-go-round at the corner of Creighton avenue and John streets and had his scalp badly injured so that several stitches were necessary to close up the wound. Mr. Koebler is a slater employed at Gerding and Auman's, on Wallace street.

Richard Billingsley yesterday had his right leg amputated by Dr. A. H. Macbeth at the St. Joseph hospital. Mr. Billingsley formerly worked at the Rolling mills and had his foot burned by a hot cylinder. Blood poisoning set in and recently gangrene and the amputation became necessary to save the man's life.

THREAD IS TO COST TEN CENTS.

Price of Cotton Soon to Be Boosted Again By the Combine.

New York, July 19.—Cotton thread, until a short time ago the most stable in price of all the staples, selling the country over for 5 cents a spool, is to be advanced again, so that the retail price will be 10 cents. On May 29 there was an advance which brought the market price to 6 and 7 cents. Cotton thread for domestic use is manufactured almost exclusively by the combine. Increase in cost of raw material and an advance in wages is the reason given for the contemplated increase in price. Independent manufacturers declare that neither of the reasons is good, for when cotton was selling much higher than it is now thread retailed for 5 cents.
